Money Shortage Exists For Sikeston Schools

BY L.L. SCHADE

Sikeston School Superintendent Lynn Twitty warned the board of education yesterday that it will be a "tight squeeze" to finish this school year without additional funds.

Twitty, in the regular monthly board meeting, said income from now until the end of the school year is status quo and an increase in expenses will have to come from transfer of funds possibly earmarked for the building fund.

He also pointed out that inflation has added five per cent increases in expenses in many school accounts.

Assessed valuation in the Sikeston district last year was increased $300,000, but this does not meet the needs of increased school operational costs, Twitty explained.

"We must find some method of additional revenue and act immediately," Twitty said. "Our beginning teaching salaries have been set at $5,300, and these must be raised with the regular staff be given an open-end contract which would permit salary increases, if funds are available for the coming school year."

It is hoped the new legislature will find means of raising the additional funds for the 1969-70 school year, Twitty said.

The board set Feb. 7 for the dedication of the new $800,000 field house. It consist of 31,000 feet in floor sapce to make the largest such structure between St. Louis and Memphis. It will have a seating capacity for more than 5,000 persons.

Several celebrated sports figures have been invited for the occasion and a banquet will be given in the school cafetorium at 5:30 p.m. The first section of bleachers have arrived and are being installed this week.

The board was emphatic that no vandalism would be tolerated, as well as students running their vehicles on prohibited school grounds Any violator will have his license revoked if found guilty.

Since the school lunch program was given a cost reduction on certain food items, the board said that a reduction of four cents per meal will be made for students.

Approval of expenses in the following funds were allowed for the past month; incidental fund $15,759.26; building fund, $4,375.69, and free text book fund (given annually) for $40,250.30.

Most of the board members stated they would attend annual Missouri School Board association and the Missouri Association of School Administrators meetings to be held in Columbia, Jan. 20-2 1

Bond Vote Set At East Prairie

EAST PRAIRIE - The City Council has called a $675,000 bond issue election to pay for improvements to the water and sewer systems. The election will be held Jan. 24.

The ordinance approved by the council calls for issuance of $375,000 in general obligation bonds and $300,000 in revenue bonds.

Water system improvements planned include a new well and pump and a water treatment plant plus purchase and installation of water meters. The new well will permit the city to place on a standby basis three old wells located at the water tank, one of which has been condemned by the State Health Department. The well is allegedly too close to a sewer line, and as a result of its continued use the "approved water supply" signs have been removed from the East Prairie city limits.

The treatment plant will be used to remove iron, mud and manganese which are present in city water.

Sewerage system improvements planned it the bond issues are approved would include: new and larger compressors at existing lift stations; extension of sewer mains to parts of the city not now served and installation of a lift station to serve a new addition.

City officials said $66,000 of the bond issue funds will be used to pay off an earlier bond issue. They say this action is necessary before new revenue bonds may be issued.

Officials report that a net increase of 25 cents on the $100 assessed valuation will be needed in the city tax rate to pay for the general obligation bond issue. Revenue bonds, if approved, would be retired by an increase in the water rate from $3 per month to about $5.50 per month.

A CITY SPOKESMAN said the city had tired to get federal aid to cover part of the cost of the improvement, but had twice been unsuccessful. The spokesman said the city council decided it would be dangerous to wait any longer in view of the present overloaded condition of the sewerage lift station compressors.

Recovery Signs Contract

Sikeston Recovery Inc. Thursday gave unanimous approval to a motion authorizing chairman W. Raymert Miller to sign a contract on behalf of the corporation with Urban Development Corporation of Cape Girardeau.

The contract is the first of a series of steps needed to construct 50 to 100 homes for persons with low incomes.

The Urban Development Corporation is a professionally staffed corporation, which has offered and completed similar package deals in other towns. If they representative signs the contract, and tentative agreement had been reached before yesterday's meeting, then they will investigate and survey Sikeston for an appropriate site and determine the number of units to be constructed. All decisions must be approved by Recovery Inc., the non profit sponsor of the FHA-financed project.

After site selection and the number of units most desirable is determined, application for financing must be made to FHA. Urban Development Corporation will serve as both counselor and contractor for the project, if allowed by FHA.

If not, the Urban Development Corporation has indicated, it will find another contractor who will provide his own financing in the interim between actual construction and receipt of FHA financing.

The package deal, which is not supposed to cost Recovery or the city of Sikeston anything, was decided upon after a contract committee of Recovery investigated Urban Development Corporation.

Charles Mitchell, Charles Matthews and Don Fulton made up the committee and recommended the contract approved by the organization.

Pre-fabricated homes have been considered for the project. Top quality pre-fabricated materials are the only type that would be allowed with FHA financing, Matthews said.

Two, three and four-bedroom units are being considered. A lease-back option is expected to be applied to each unit, whereby the renter can receive rent supplement from the federal government. But if the renter's income increases, he will not be forced to vacate. Rather, he can make bigger payments per month, and buy the house.

The program is known as 221 (d3) of the Federal Housing Act. Other matters at the meeting Thursday included the formal approval of trading two lots in Sunset for two other lots owned by Recover. The lots were on the same block.

Recovery has four homes under construction in Sunset. It has been instrumental in the construction of two new houses completed in the area, which were financed by Kendall Sikes. It also was instrumental in the remodeling of two homes, which was financed by Charles Mitchell.

LBJ Wants Company in Urging Surtax Extension

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Minority Leader Everett M. Dirksen says President Johnson wants the 10 per cent income surtax extended, but "he would like some company" in recommending it to Congress.

Three were indications Thursday Johnson wants President-elect Nixon to join him in the recommendation so the issue would not become the political controversy it was before Congress passed the surtax, at Johnson's request, last year.

The surtax expires June 30. It was originally imposed as an anti-inflation measure.

House Minority Leader Gerald R. Ford, said he understood Johnson was prepared to make a statement about the surtax in his State of the Union message or budget request, and that Nixon would then issue a statement of his own.

House Majority Leader Carl Albert said, however, the White House had received no word from Nixon Thursday afternoon.

Dirksen told newsmen Thursday that Johnson has drawn up a tentative budget of $195 billion for the fiscal year starting July 1, an increase of $10.6 billion over current federal spending.

But the Illinois Republican said the $195 billion was a 'base figure" which could be changed, depending on whether Johnson decides in favor of recommending the surtax extension.

Dirksen said congressional leaders were told at a White House meeting revenues would total about $198 billion during the year if the surtax were extended, and Johnson's tentative budget would allow for a $3 billion surplus.

In New York, a spokesman for Nixon said the President-elect had no comment.

Saigon Rates '68 Enemy Losses at 191,307 Men

SAIGON (AP) - The South Vietnamese government claimed today 191,307 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops were killed in 1968, nearly six times allied losses.

But North Vietnam called 1968 "the best year so far in the Vietnamese people's struggle against U.S. aggression."

The Saigon government put South Vietnamese losses last year at 17,486 killed. The U.S. Command has not released official figures for the year, but American battle deaths through Dec. 28 were 14,521.

Despite its claim of heavy losses suffered by the enemy, the government in a yearend review estimated total enemy strength at 300,100 Viet Cong, North Vietnamese and political cadre. It claimed 151,000 North Vietnamese troops had infiltrated the South in 1968 - an assessment vastly differ..at from unofficial U.S. estimates of 225,000 to 230,000 men.

The U.S. Command does not publish official estimates of enemy strength, but reliable American sources said the South Vietnamese estimate was considered "high."

In addition to those killed in action, the Saigon government said the enemy lost 21,050 men taken captive and 17,597 who defected under the "Open Arms" program. This accounted for a total enemy manpower loss of 229,954 last year, the government said.

However, it claimed that all but 20,900 of these men were replaced by the enemy command.

But the report said the average battalion of Communist troops now is operating at half-strength and "their fighting capability is now very limited compared with that of their battlations in 1967."

Viet Cong gunners zeroed in on the airfield outside Can Tho, in the delta, a delta airfield at Sco Trang; an American artillery base near the Cambodian border northwest of Saigon, and a South Vietnamese regimental headquarters at Quang Ngai airfield in the far northern warn zone.

None of the attacks did much damage or caused serious casualties.

The U.S. Command said 60 mortar and bazooka shells raked the asphalt tarmac and the frame administration buildings of Binh Thuy airfield, just outside the main delta city of Can Tho, before dawn. One South Vietnamese soldier was killed and a few American and government wounded were reported, but officers said the shells failed to hit any planes or helicopters in sandbag shelters.

Dixon Defies Call to Resign

WASHINGTON (AP)—Paul Rand Dixon says he has no intention of resigning the chairmanship of the Federal Trade Commission as urged by law students who did a critical study of the agency under the direction of Ralph Nader.

At a news conference Thursday, Dixon said the report calling for his resignation is "a hysterical, antibusiness diatribe and a scurrilous, untruthful attack."

The report was issued Sunday after a summer-long investigation of the FTC. The students were organized by Nader, a critic of the auto industry and government agencies.

Nader could not be reached for comment on Dixon's rebuttal.

Among the accusations of the students was one that Dixon personally suppressed a report criticizing auto manufacturers for their warranty practices. Dixon called this a "blatant lie."

Another Venus Shot Launched

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union today launched an unmanned space probe toward Venus designed to make a soft landing on the night side of the planet.

An official announcement said the craft, Venus 6, would operate in conjunction with Venus 5, launched five days ago.

The Soviet Union pioneered interplanetary contract when Venus 4 reached the distant planet Oct. 18, 1967.

The two new craft are expected to make the 155 million-mile trip by mid-May.

Tass said Venus 6 is designed to make a "smooth descent in the Venus atmosphere."

The equipment aboard will carry out "Scientific explorations together with Venus 5," Tass said.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

THE PUEBLO PROBE

The timing of a Navy court of inquiry into all aspects of the seizure by North Korea of the intelligence ship PUEBLO remains vague. Once a thorough debriefing has been completed, the 82 survivors will receive a short furlough. Then they will be subject to one of the most sensitive probes in naval history.

Convening the court does not carry an implication that the crew and Commander Lloyd M. Bucher were guilty of wrongdoing while captives of the North Koreans. Adm. John J. Hyland, Pacific Fleet commander, who authorized the court, is quoted as telling the crew: "You are regarded as a group of young heroes and we are very proud of the way you stuck it out for such a prolonged period." The crew was released Dec. 23, exactly 11 months after their ship was captured.

But the PUEBLO case, with its "confessions" and new disclosures of North Korean brutality in treatment of prisoners, could result in reexamination of the rules of behavior for American military men taken prisoner. The rules are embodied in a six-points "Code of Conduct for Members of the U. S. Armed Forces." President Eisenhower promulgated the rules in an executive order of Aug. 17, 1955, after inquiries had established that North Korea and Red China had "brainwashed" many U. S. prisoners and induced some to become defectors.

In less sophisticated days, when the Geneva Convention was an honored document, the formula followed by all nations was that prisoners of war were required to give them "name, rank, and serial number" -- and nothing more. But in the aftermath of the Korean War, 565 former American POWs were investigated for allegedly collaborating with the enemy. According to reports at the time, thousands more had given their captors more than the three basic items of information.

Of 4,428 Americans who survived their captivity in the Korean War, 21 became turncoats, refusing repatriation. And 192 of the returnees, in the words of the U. S. Advisory Committee on Prisoners of War, were found "chargeable with serious offenses against comrades or the United States." Only a few were courtmartialed, and the charge against them was for "aiding the enemy" -- an offense which verges on treason.

President Eisenhower's code, advisory but not binding, adds "date of birth" to name, rank and serial number. It further states: "I will evade answering further questions to the utmost of my ability. I will make no oral or written statements disloyal to my country and its allies or harmful to their cause."

Commander Bucher in his well-publicized press statement at Panmunjom on Dec. 23 said: "We went through a harassment period there that was never-ending -- continued repetition on charges against us which eventually, of course were admitted to by myself in order to save some people from some fairly serious misfortune."

The plight of the PUEBLO crew has been described by London's DAILY SKETCH, which notes that they were beaten and bullied by the North Koreans. "Now they are to be interviewed by intelligence officers and psychiatrists in their own country," says the newspaper. "For years they may be watched and very probably they will be periodically vetted (quizzed). However slight, there will always remain the risk that members of the crew may have been brainwashed into becoming potential traitors to their own country." The British paper makes the point that all this is through no fault of their own, and comments: "What a treacherous world we live in."

THE DAY AFTER ELECTION

One of the most hotly-contested issues before the last session of Congress was the complusory gun registration bill. The Administration proposed such legislation and thousands of Americans wrote or wired their objections to Congress. The Congress responded by defeating all gun registration bills. The only gun bill passed in the session was one restricting interstate and mail-order sales of firearms.

But on November 6 - the day after the Federal elections - announcement of a Federal gun registration edict was made in Washington, Congress notwithstanding. What bureaucrat presumes to impose such regulations? Believe it or not, the Collector of Internal Revenue.

In the Federal Register for November 6, 1968, Volume 23, No. 217, the Internal Revenue Service served notice that it is prepared to enforce new rules on reporting the sales of ammunition and firearms. Under the new rules, any person buying firearms or ammunition from a dealer will have to report his name and address, height and weight, place and date of birth, and provide identification. Further, the rules will empower the regional reports from all dealers on the names and addresses of every person who buys firearms or ammunition.

Thus, every firearm, and every purchase of ammunition, will be a permanent record in the files of the Internal Revenue Service. And that is gun registration by bureaucrat, in defiance of the clearly expressed will of the Congress of the United States.

It will be more difficult to arouse public opinion on the issue now, because those citizens who screamed last summer have relaxed in the belief that the Congress rejected gun registration. And it did. But the frightening fact is that the Internal Revenue Service is prepared to do, on its own, what the Congress refused to make the law of the land.

Delusions of grandeur are not unknown among bureaucrats. But no manifestation has been so conspicuous as this travesty. It is a bad joke. And unless Congress has become a joke, it will quickly correct the Federal Register for November 6, 1968.

An American Petroleum Institute publication observed that the domestic petroleum industry is faced with the task of producing 64 billion barrels of liquid petroleum between 1965 and 1980 while maintaining adequate reserves. This has been determined by a new U.S. Department of the Interior study which concludes that oilmen must step up their rate of petroleum discoveries and achieve greater efficiencies in recovering oil already discovered, if future petroleum requirements are to be satisifed.

For most of the independent business proprietors, 1968 will go down as the year of "the big squeeze".

The squeeze came as inflation pushed overhead costs up on the one hand and business owners fought to achieve offsetting higher sales in the face of keener competition for the customer's shrinking dollar after taxes on the other hand.

"Doing more business but making less money" sums up the volunteer comments made by independent merchants and professionals in answering the National Federation of Business' survey of more than 260,000 members. While 84 per cent of the respondents reported higher prices on goods they purchased for resale, and 81 per cent had higher payroll costs, only 54 per cent showed improved gross revenue. In a year of unbridled inflation, one of every five independents saw revenue drop, and almost one-fourth said it was unchanged from a year earlier.

The prevailing hope now among these independent small businessmen is that the new Administration will act on many problems which endanger small and independent business. Namely, one would permit a business to plow back more money into its operations before the Federal income tax bite; the other would encourage location of new business enterprises in rural and economically-depressed areas. Surveys show business in rural areas and farm states are particularly hard-pressed in view of lower prices on farm products.

There is no question that Big Government has been rough in its treatment of small, independent businesses when it has forced them to the same standards applied to Big Business in minimum wages and higher taxes.

According to Mr. C. Joseph Stetler president of the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, prescription drugs take only 9.8 cents of the health care dollar -- compared to 11.7 cents in 1957. Clearly, the pharmaceutical industry's products are succeeding in protecting health and reducing the cost of illness. This is a fine performance at a time when all other prices are surging upward.

TORTURE SHOWS VALIDITY OF PUEBLO'S MISSION

It would be wonderful to think that the release of the 82 surviving members of the crew of the USS Pueblo in time for Christmas was a gesture of good will toward men on the part of the North Koreans, a sign that the spirit of the season, which is not an exclusive Christian possession, had permeated even behind the Bamboo Curtain.

Unfortunately, the tales the men have recounted of 11 months of brutal treatment, verified by their debilitated physical condition, preclude any such assumption.

Perhaps it is enough just to be thankful that all of the men but one, who was killed at the time the ship was seized, are alive and in fair health. Their bodies will quickly recover from the ordeal under the loving care of their grateful families, though the invisible mental scars they bear may be another matter.

The United States paid a price for their release by signing an apology for the intrusion of the Pueblo into North Korean waters. It has no more validity than the confessions tortured our of accused witches in the Middles Ages, which is about as far as the Asian Communists have progressed on the scale of civilization.

The experience of these men at the hands of the North Koreans is sufficient demonstration of why they had to be where they were when they were captured.

Missouri's Motor Vehicle Inspection Law officially became effective this month. Car owners are required to have their vehicles inspected within 30 days prior to registration. Inspections are made of brakes, lighting equipment, signaling devices, steering mechanisms, horns, mirrors, windshield wipers, tires, exhaust system, glass, air pollution control devices, and any other equipment required by the State. Proof of ownership is also required at the time a vehicle is presented for inspection.

A certificate of inspection and approval will be affixed to the lower left hand corner of the windshield if the vehicle meets all the requirements of inspection. The cost of the inspection is $2.50. If the vehicle is rejected, the vehicle owner will be provided with a receipt that the fee has been paid and a list of the defects. The owner may remove the vehicle to any place of his own choice or he may repair the vehicle himself. He has 15 days in which to correct any defeats. If the defects are corrected and the vehicle returned to the station that made the original inspection within ten days, no addition fee will be charged. Should the vehicle owner decide to have the repairs made at the inspection station, a written estimate of the costs for such repairs must be given to the vehicle owner who must sign an authorization before any repairs can be made.

Colonel E. I. (Mike) Hockaday, the Superintendent of the Missouri Highway Patrol, noted that the motor vehicle inspection program is an important part of the State's total traffic safety effort. He encouraged vehicle owners to develop a preventive maintenance program for their vehicles so as to assure that the safety devices on the vehicles are properly operating at all times.

"I've circled this block for 20 minutes. I'm late for an appointment and if I don't park here I'll lose my job. Forgive us our trespasses."

FREE LOVE

There is a lot of argument about the morals of today. Some insist that morals have declined greatly. Others claim that this generation is no worse than generations past, and that the only change is one of more openness about sex and other matters. In any event, one of the expressions that has found its way into our vocabulary is "free love." In common usage, the phrase has come to mean promiscuity.

But the U.S. Supreme Court has brought a new form of "free love" into existence. The court says that a woman and her lover of the moment may engage in a continuing affair without fear of losing her ADC subsidy. ADC, of course, is Aid to Dependent Children.

Some 18 states and the District of Columbia were under the impression that if a man was living in the house with a mother they had the right to assume that he was picking up the tab for the family. That, it now appears, is an archaic concept, although a few state welfare agencies have indicated that they will not bow to the Court's ruling. Arkansas' welfare commissioner, Len Blaylock, says that the will continue to ban these sex-subsidies until specifically required to conform. At issue is the 80 percent of such ADC payments which comes out of Washington, while the individual states pay only 20 percent. Presumably Washington would cut off the 80 percent payment to any state which failed to conform to the Court's ruling. At the moment, it appears that a number of states will balk until test cases bring decisions specifically applicable to each individual state.

A few years ago a New Jersey welfare official was chastised for daring to suggest that women on welfare rolls who bore illegitimate children should be prosecuted under the state's laws against premarital and extramarital relations. Like many other state officials he was wrestling with the problem of the women who keep turning up on welfare rolls with newborn dependent children, and who received increase welfare checks as the brood increass. They couldn't do better if they were unionized. How many unions can negotiate a new contract every 9 months?

It is estimated that the Supreme Court's free love ruling may increase the number of children on relief roles by as much as 15 percent.

A young man, some decades ago, who had flunked his entrance examinations to Princeton, was preparing to return home when he met President McCosh on the campus. He spoke to the president: "Although I failed to pass the tests, I learned a lot here."

Since the boy had not attended Princeton, McCosh did not understand.

What have you learned from us?" he asked.

The boys aid, 'How little I know."

President Mc Cosh thought for several moments, then said, 'Sir, regardless of how you did in your tests, we will take you. You are two years ahead of the rest of them."

THE REVOLUTION IN PANAMA

Recently the Panamanian government of Arnulfo Arias was overthrown, and Arias was forced to flee. This was the third time that an Arias government had been forcibly removed from office. This time, he had governed for only eleven days. The obvious instability of Panama proves that we should not surrender our sovereignty over the Canal Zone to this country.

The Panama Canal is essential to our security and to the commerce of the world. This vital transportation artery must be controlled by a stable government. Panama cannot provide this stability.

Upon being overthrown, Arias fled for refuge to the Canal Zone itself. If the treaty he had worked for had been signed last year, this territory would not have been a refuge for him.

If such a treaty were ever signed, Panamanian instability would be likely to increase.

The draft treaty provided that management and defense of the canal would be the responsibility of a commission on which Panama would lack only one vote of having a majority. Operation of the canal, especially its revenue, would become a leading issue in Panamanian politic. We could be sure from one year to the next what kind of policies would be advocated by Panama.

The tolls of the Panama Canal need to be kept as low as possible to facilitate world commerce. Yet these tolls could easily become an issue in Panamanian elections search party promised to raise the tolls to increase government revenues.

Panamanian governments have lacked the stability to govern their country properly. They should not be given authority over the Canal Zone. HLH

Washington - Merry Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON SAY: Gov. Hickel of Alaska appeared to have a conflict of interest; Maurice Stans has had experience in transferring administrations; he is a big game hunter

WASHINGTON -- President-elect Nixon's counsel, John D. Ehrlichman, is making a painstaking, conscientious effort to detect conflicts of interest among new Nixon appointees before they take office. He has prepared a black loose-leaf notebook with careful instructions for every top appointee to guard against conflicts.

One instruction reads: "The appearance of a conflict could be just as embarrassing to the Administration and the cabinet appointee as an actual conflict."

We suggest that both Mr. Ehrlichman and the senate interior committee, which shortly will examine the qualifications of Walter J. Hickel to be secretary of the interior, take a good look at the operations of Mr. Hickel's plumbing and heating company while Hickel was -- and still is -- Governor of Alaska.

They will find that the Hickel company was able to get a subcontract for the plumbing and heating for the Anchorage Airport despite the fact that it was not originally the low bidder. The work involved about $1,00,000.

The overall work on the Anchorage Airport was being bid for four general contractors who had asked for bids on the heating and plumbing by subcontractors. The lowest bidder with three of the companies and reportedly with the fourth was C. R. Lewis, who operates an Alaskan plumbing and heating firm of long standing.

When Mr. Lewis was questioned on the telephone in Anchorage, he was hesitant about discussing the bids.

"I'm a Republican state senator," he said, "and Hickel is the Republican Governor. It's a bit sticky for me."

Pressed further, he explained:

"There were four general contractors bidding and with three of them my company was low. With the fourth they said we were not low, that the Governor's firm was low. This was last May or June.

"For weeks we couldn't get the figures out of them. We couldn't find out who was low bidder. With the other companies we had no trouble. We got the figures right away. But with the fourth we just ran up against a blank wall, and in the end the Governor's firm got the subcontract. We heard our bid was thrown out on a technicality."

The interesting point is why a firm belonging to the Governor of Alaska was bidding on a government contract at all. A further point is: will his companies continue to operate in Alaska, a state over which he as secretary of the interior will have control of about 8- per cent of the land?

-LAIRD COMMANDS-

Just before Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill., was elected to succeed Rep. Mel Laird, R-Wis., as chairman of the House Republican conference, Laird, wielding the gavel for the last time, exhorted colleagues:

"Put your ballots in the box, gentlemen. Let's hurry it up a little. We're wasting time."

"Now, just a minute, Mel," ribbed Rep. John Ashbrook, R-Ohio. "You haven't as yet become the new Secretary of Defense. You're not talking to a bunch of Generals."

-JUNIOR INAUGURAL BALL-

There's going to be a dividend to the inaugural balls commemorating the beginning of the Nixon administration. One day later, Jan. 21, the Republican inaugural committee will turn over the big ball room at the Sheraton-Park Hotel to 2,000 high school students, most of them Negro, for an "after inaugural ball."

Mark Evans, veteran TV commentator and executive, who is chairman of the inaugural ball committee, conveived the idea as a means of inspiring good citizenship in the nation's capital.

"These are the kids who will be the future leaders of the capital," says Evans. "We're letting them run the ball. We're merely leaving the decorations, all the trimmings and giving them a little guidance. Someday they'll be inaugurating a president of their own."

-SMOOTH TRANSFER-

The experts all agree that no outgoing administration in this century has cooperated so carefully with a new administration for a smooth transfer of government as that of President Johnson. But there is one man in the Nixon administration, Secretary of Commerce Maurice Stans, who chalked up something of a record in 1960.

When Kennedy was taking over from Eisenhower, Stans, the director of the budget, prepared "position papers" regarding every point of the Democratic platform, in order to help the new Democratic administration carry them out.

He also prepared 70 memos for the Kennedy administration on various government agencies and their problems, detailing exactly what certain programs were doing and what they were costing.

Stans is dominated by two passions - stalking big game in Africa and stalking government waste in Washington.

On his African safaris, Stans has bagged enough big game to stock the children's nature museum of Rock Hill, S. C., with jungle trophies and to outfit his wife in Leopard-skin coat, Zebra hat, shoes, purse, and a lion-skin handbag.

The son of an immigrant Belgian house painter who was also Koncert-Meister of the town's brass band, Stans grew up in the farming village of Shakopee, Minn., where he learned to toot the saxophone. When he left Shakopee, he took with him his sax plus $151 he had earned playing it for a local dance band.

He studied accounting at night at Northwestern University, supported himself by day as a stenographer. He now ends up in the cabinet.

Poor Richard: Going Rate for Kings and Queens makes U.S. appear a Piker

Washington, D.C.: -- A crown it is that seldom kings enjoy, according to a well-placed source close to the late Henry VI. But not for want of petty cash. The going rates for emperors and kings, dukes and queens, is far better than the commoner, Richard Nixon, will get.

This column did a swift survey of the going rates for heads of state and it's obvious that we are shortchanging our presidents. Even at $200,000 a year, President Nixon will be receiving some $66,000 less than Grand Duke Jean of Luxembourg.

Obviously Mr. Nixon, as a plebeian, is running far behind the crowned heads of Europe. He may want to continue his wooing of American labor by asking for a federal union charter for himself.

Those Scandinavian kings obviously have a royal local of some kind. Denmark's Frederik IX Norway's Olav V and Sweden's Gustavus VI Adolphus average about $645,000 annually. The Danish monarch appears to be a better collective bargainer. He has a cost-of-living escalator cluase written into the statue on the regal stipend.

But he does have to care for a castle or two -- one of which, Elsinore by name, does pretty well, as tourists come in search of the melancholy Dane.

Apparently there's a better going rate for queens. The total royal allowance for Her Majesty, the gracious Elizabeth of Britain, comes to $1,140,000. On this allowance she does maintain a palace or two. But Prince Charles is no burden. Next November, when he turns 21, he'll inherit an income of some $480,000.

From the Netherlands embassy comes word that the Dutch queen receives some $1.4 million annually. The largesse in the Hague shames us. The queen was getting but $6,00,000 until recently. Then, not only was the allowance increased, but it was hiked retroactively.

And right next door in Blegium, King Baudouin I receives $840,000 annually. He too has a cost-of-living escalator arrangement. When the king was a bachelor, his income was lower -- $720,000 a year. A romantically generous constition allows him another $120,00 to care for his new queen.

Young King Constatine II did not do badly before the putsch. He received $600,000 annually, but there was always the palace. There is some doubt now whether or not he is receiving his money in absentia. But it's worth noting that the going rate for royalty in Athens was better than $11,000 a week.

And then there is the Emperor of Japan. The Japanese, who may get a bit proletarianly tumultuous and temperatmental in the streets, respect their monarch. Just about a year ago, they raised his income from $189,000 to $233,000 a year because of rising prices. It all sounds more awesome in Japanese currency -- 84 million yen now, compared with 68 million in 1967. And you do get more for your yen than for the dollar if you know where to buy.

With this income, Emperor Hirohito must care for Empress Nagako and Crown Prince Akihito. And that fascinating palace and those magnificent horses.

And then there is the nervous "little king," Jordan's Hussein. When in Hebron recently, I inquired of some substantial citizens. The king has a large personal fortune. But he's not keeping it in Anman these days. His tiny kingdom gives him $140,000 annually. Compare this with Mr. Nixon's $200,000 and the $100,000 of past presidents.

It's not always easy to learn the pay scales of monarchs. Embassies are horrified by curious questioners.

At the Libyan embassy, for example, because of the new wealth, I asked after the pay of King Mohammed Idras el Senussi. The lady was shocked that anyone would ask. But it does run close to a million a year I hear.

At the Iranian embassy, they were friendlier. The Persians always are. When I asked about the shah, I was told I would have to be satisifed with "it is a considerable amount."

When I tried either the missions or emabssies of such royal kingdoms as Cambodia, Kuwait, Morocco, Nepal and Saudi Arabia, I could have frozen a martini on the iciness. Other kingdoms, such as Afghanistan and Thailand, were surprised, horrified and unnerved that anyone should think in terms of paying a king.

But out of all this came one certainty -- Americans, judging by what other peoples do for their first families, are mighty chinchy with ours.

Children and Their World of Play

GRETCHEN MYERS, three year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Myers, Canalou, stands on her train going one way.

BY MARGARET DuBOIS

Adults sometimes have a tendency to say, "now when I was a kid..." Children are children and always have been. Hickory switches may not be as popular today as they once were, and the toys are more sophistocated, but boys still like mechanical toys and girls stick close to baby dolls and buggies.

Due to smaller families and newer ideas, most children receive more individual attention from their parents. The favorite time allotted for this seems to be in the evening when the toddlers are tucked in and the older children can sit quietly while the parents read to them or just discuss the happenings of a busy day.

Even with modern time-saving devices for mothers, they still don't have time to sit and play with the children. Television is a new discovery for children when they reach the age of three and and can appreciate the shows designed for their entertainment. The games and toys designed for educational purposes fun are also take up several hours of fun each day. Most children have a wide variety of toys, and can pick and choose until they have found something interesting.

But like always, give a child a string and a box, and their imagination can conjure up a million things to do with them.

Of course, kids are in revolt in every generation, but at least our generation's mothers made us wash before we protested.

SURROUNDED BY PUTTY dogs, work benches, dolls and tractors, Sarah, three and Allen, one, choose a toy and enter into that world of fantasy that adults may not enter. They are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Barks, 802 Sikes.

The Japanese art of bonzai is the cultivation of trees purposely dwarfed and trained into carefully planned shapes.

"What The Mission Of The Church Is Not."

Last week in our lesson on "the mission of the church." We emphasized that the church is a divine arrangment with a divine mission, showing, from Ephesians 4:11-12 that its mission goes in three directions. And as far as I know the church has no other mission on earth than: preaching the gospel, ministering to certain ones, edifing itself. But because some have failed to see this and has engaged the church, (in some areas), in other activity, it is necessary that we consider a lesson "what the mission of the church is not." With hopes that all will study these matters and realize the seriousness envolved, in failing to respect God's pattern for His church. (Heb. 8:105). (1) The mission of the church is not social, while the gospel contains some social implications, as far as the Christian is concerned, the gospel is not social. Example: A Christian is obligated to feed a hungry neighbor a needed meal as well as teach him the gospel. But the ultimate purpose of the gospel is to save man from his sins that he might go to heaven. I understand Jesus' conception of the church to have been totally spiritual when He told Pilate that His kingdom was not of this world. (John 18:36). It would be irreconcilable with this spiritual concept of the church, to envision the kingdom of the Lord, sapping its strength groping about trying to cope with the manifold social injustices in the kingdoms of men...Problems which the church of the Lord cannot began to solve if it expends the last ounce of its energy exist. If Christ intended for His church to solve the world problems of poverty, delinquency, starvation, the helpless aged and the homeless orphans. He not only gave the church a problem to solve far beyond its ability, but indeed, the whole so-called "Christian world" has not touched the hem of the garment. The gospel of Christ is not a "social gospel," the church of the Lord is not a "social institution." While the gospel with its principles of everlasting truth, will work social reform, it does so by reforming the individual's manner of living and thinking. If you desire to get the individual. Paul taught, if Christianity found a man either slave or master, it was to make a better one out of him (1 Cor. 7:20-22). He also taught, that the home is to be the center of social activity --- not the church. (1 Cor. 11:20-22) The church did not undertake social reform or social guidance, in the days of the apostles. (2) It is not the business of the church to provide and serve as guide in recreational activity. Church basketball teams, ping-pong games, skating parties and swimming parties and the like are a perversion of the resources and mission of the church. (3) Making money is not the function of the church. (5) Political issues do not belong in the church. God ordained civil government to meet all such issues and resolve them. (Romans 13:1-7; 1 Peter 2:13-17). There are many more things which do not belong in the church and its mission, but space will not permit to list all of them. However, no man has the right to prostitute the energy, strength, zeal or resources of the church of our Lord to serve human airms or purposes.

Mizzou Hopes to Cure League Win Illness

COLUMBIA - Missouri's basketballers, fighting off a two-game Big Eight Conference illness run into rampaging Kansas Saturday here--hardly the type of prescription any doctor would recommend.

The Tigers still are looking for their first Big Eight victory after narrow-margin defeats at Oklahoma State and Oklahoma. They'll be the underdogs again Saturday in Brewer field house against the Jayhawks, tied for the Big Eight lead with Kansas State and Colorado at 2-0.

"It's good to get home but this game really will be a challenge to us," Tiger coach Norm Stewart remarked as he tried to regroup his forces for the first of two successive home games. The Tigers are 4-0 in Brewer this season.

Stewart hopes his team can bounce back from the two heartbreaking defeats --61-60 in overtime to the Cowpokes and 62-58 to the Sooners. Kansas has routed Iowa State 94-61 and nipped Nebraska 56-52.

The Jayhawks stand 13-1 for the season and are boasting a 12-game winning streak. The nation's fifth-ranked team is only three victories away from becoming the first college basketball entry in history to register 1,000 victories.

If K. U. keeps rolling, victory number one-grand will come against arch-rival Kansas State on Jan. 18 at Manhattan -- which also will be the collegiate finale for Jayhawk all-American and Olympic hero Jo Jo White.

White, a mid-year graduate, will be winding up his career after three seasons as the Big Eight's premier backcourt performer. White scored a career high 28 points against the Tigers here last year.

The Jayhawks. 12 - game winning streak is their longest in 12 years -- dating back to the Wilt Chamberlain days of 1957. Kansas' longest winning streak, however, is 23, set in 1935-36.

Stewart doesn't plan any lineup changes but notes his Tigers again will be looking up to a predominantly - taller Jayhawk outfit. Mizzou's tallest starter will be 6-6 center Chuck Kundert. Kansas will counter with Roger Brown (6-10) at center and sophomore Dave Robisch (6-9) at forward.

Don Tomlinson (6-4) still leads the Rigers' scoring chartwith a 16.6 average with all-Big Eight tournament guard Dave Pike (5-11) next in line at 14.2. Theo Franks (6-2) has an average of 10.6 and the team's other starter Doug Johnson (6-5) stands at 10.2.

The Tigers' next game will be a regionally-televised conference test on Jan. 18 here against Iowa State.

Kansas' all-American JoJo White will be honored by the Tiger Tail-Twisters during the Missouri - K. U. basketball game here Saturday night.

The group, made up of Mizzou fans who sit together behind the Tigers' bench, will present a plague to White honoring him for his part in the United States Olympic basketball team's successful Gold medal quest. A similar award is planned when the team's coach, Henry Iba of Oklahoma State comes here on Feb. 8.

Sikeston Upset By Central In Area Wrestling Rival

BY TERRY NOWELL

CAPE GIRARDEAU - Cape Central Tigers struggled to take a 27-19 win over the Sikeston Bulldog wrestlers last night. Sikeston's junior varsity squad also took a loss as they were defeated by the Tigers, 21-18.

This marks Sikeston's second loss of the season against no wins and the junior varsity squad's first loss as they previously defeated Charleston, 33-13.

Sikeston had a few boys out with sickness and were forced to involve some inexperienced boys in the match. Bulldogs lost a few close vital matches which may have been the major factor in the team's loss.

The battle started as Sikeston's Jeff Porter was defeated by Taylor, 10-9, in the 95-pound class. In the 103-pound class, Henry Gross won his first match of the season as he defeated Central's contender, Baker.

Terry Nowell lost his first match as his undefeated 112-pound contender, Conner, edged by 2-0. This battle and those of the Bulldogs' Gary Robey, Randy Reynolds, and Jeff Porter were matches that Sikeston came very close to winning, but resulted in a big contribution to Sikeston's loss.

Central's Kirchoff defeated Jim Welch, by a pin, in the 120-pound class of competition. Cliff Morris took his second loss of the season as he was pinned in the third period by Cape's Buster.

First year wrestler Kent McKinly, was pinned in the second period by Central's 165-pound competitor, Kasten.

Sikeston's 165-pound defending champion defeated Pigg by a pin in the first period in the 180-pound class.

Heavyweight wrestler, Willie Savage, pinned Cape's Boston in the third period of action.

In the junior varsity match, wins were received by Tom Robey, Larry Mike Lambert, and Mike Fansler from Sikeston.

Other junior varsity wrestlers who participated in the match were Tom Robey, Larry McMillan, Ughe Howard, Larry Marshal, Buddy Vaughn, and Steve Long.

Sikeston is scheduled to take part in the annual Tri-State Invitational Tournament at Charleston tomorrow. This competition will involve an expected eight teams from Missouri, Illinois, and Kentucky.

MONTREAL AP - Sponsors of Loyola College's fourth annual centennial hockey tournament say they would like to include a European country-hopefully the Soviet Union - in the 1970 meet.

They said "every available resource" would be used to encourage Russia to send a representative university to the games, including an offer of a return series of games in Russia during the Christmas school break in 1970. Eight Canadian and U. S. schools participated in this year's meet, won by the University of Toronto Blues over the weekend.

Eagles - Pirate Clash Top Match

The Oran Eagles, led by a power-packed starting five, have streaked to a 16-0 record this season and are the only unbeaten cagers in the district.

Coach Gene Bess' squad embarks on its second road game of the week tonight when it goes to Matthews and seemingly will have a clear road ahead until regional time if it meets the Pirates test.

Winners of two tournament titles, the Eagles have beaten back all threats rather handily throught its first half schedule and have eliminated top teams in each class in doing so.

Oran hopes to avenge one of its three losses it suffered last season in tonight's meeting with the Pirates, who eliminated the Eagles in the finals of the Class M regional at Illmo-Scott City to advance through the state bracket for the M title. It's other two losses, both to Scott County Central, already have been avenged.

The Pirates have struggled since Christmas, having won one game and lose one. It comes into tonight's encounter 11-2.

This encounter tops the district's schedule.

Matthews also has a little avenge to take out on the Eagles as it suffered its only loss of last season to the Oran quintet in the regular scheduled meeting.

Tonight's schedule:
Illmo-Scott City at Puxico
Qulin at Naylor
Bernie at Clarkton
Risco at Parma
Bell City at Richland
St. Henry's at College High

By the Missouri Department of Conservation

JEFFERSON CITY -- Two "sportsmen's taxes" have made $985,166 available to Missouri for fish and wildlife restroation projects during fiscal 1969.

The amount was apportioned to the Missouri Department of Conservation as the state's share of the federal aid in fish and wildlife restroation programs, better known as the Pittman-Robertson and Dingell-Johnson acts.

The funds came from excise taxes on fishing equipment and sporting firearms and ammunition, occasionally called "the nation's only popular taxes". Suggestions by the federal government that these excise taxes be discontinued have brought quick reactions from sportsmen who want them retained.

Missouri ranked thirteenth among the states in the total funds apportioned for 1969, seventh in Dingell-Johnson funds for fisheries at $239,817, and fourteenth in Pittman-Robertson funds for wildlife with $745,349. The funds are apportioned on the basis of a formula which includes the state's area and its number of hunting and fishing permit holders.

As noted in a recent story in U. S. News & World Report, "Hunting -- a Big Business that's Getting Bigger", the Pittman-Robertson funds have been largely responsible for the comeback of the deer and wild turkey populations which once were nearly extinct.

The story estimates that there are nearly 20 million hunters in the United States and that they spent more than $1.1 billion in a single year on guns, ammunition, dogs, licenses, transportation and guides. "Not covered are such costs as motel bills."

The P-R fund's value is indicated by the magazine's statement, "Today's abundance of game of many tupes constitutes a major success in conservation. Even with the wildlife habitat increasingly reduced by turnpikes, housing, and shopping centers, conservation practices are keeping wildlife population at a high level."

In Missouri it has provided $8,267,068 for wildlife research and land acquisition since 1939. Nationally it totalled $30,320,000 this year and almost $325 million in 30 years.

The Dingell-Johnson Act, which finances the bulk of Missouri's fisheries research and some land acquisition and development for lake sites, was begun in 1950.

Ron Jaynes' Sports Corner

Our mystic bulb is jumping with news of the future . . . so here's your look at tonight's basketball action:

ORAN AT MATTHEWS -- If you had earlier consulted this corner about this game we might have thought Matthews had a chance . . . but not now. Oran 79, Matthews 60.

BELL CITY AT RICHLAND -- Ray Fisher's Rebels are on the move and won't be bothered by tonight's opponent. Richland 83, Bell City 55.

ILLMO-SCOTT CITY AT PUXICO -- It's a long trip to Puxico from Rams headquarters . . . but it'll be an even longer one with the defeat to take back. Puxico 68, I-SC 50.

BERNIE AT CLARKTON -- This could be a close match. Bernie will have to be up and ready for the Reindeer, who can make it tough on the home woods, but we'll say . . . Bernie 59, Clarkton 46.

ST. HENRY AT COLLEGE HIGH -- The Preps will have little trouble tonight . . . Shall we say more. College High 71, St. Henry 59.

ADVANCE AT BLOOMFIELD -- The Wildcats deliberate type of game failed to work in its tournament against the Hornets and we fret to think what would happen if it ran with them . . . No chance. Advance 71, Bloomfield 55.

KENNETT AT JACKSON -- This will be a toughie for both clubs as the conference games make both teams that much determined. We'll go with the Indians . . . Kennett that is . . . Just because of its experience gained this season. Kennett 66, Jackson 58.

CHAFFEE AT EAST PRAIRIE -- The Red Devils had a little trouble in its most recent game . . . scoring. It had better sharpen those eyes because the Eagles are improving by each week. Chaffee 63, East Prairie 55.

PERRYVILLE AT CAPE CENTRAL -- Now here's a toughie . . . Both teams thrive on defense . . . and we see a defensive deadlock . . . Overtime is the call . . . Perryville 68, Cape Central 65.

GIDEON AT KELLY -- The Bulldogs are fresh from upsetting Lilbourn while the Hawks are fresh from almost recording an upset. We see . . . Gideon 69, Kelly 59.

PORTAGEVILLE AT NEW MADRID -- We pass . . . O well . . . The Indians home court advantage is 10 points to its credit, but the Bulldogs have made the turn and seem toughning up. Portageville 57, New Madrid 49.

For the 14th consecutive year the National Wildlife Federation has published the "Conservation Directory," the most comprehensive listing of government and private conservation and natural resource organizations and their personnel.

The "Directory" contains sections listing Federal and State agencies, citizen groups on a national and state level, as well as regional and international organizations concerned with natural resources. Other "Conservation Directory" features include a section on Congressional committees related to conservation interests, a listing of the fish and game commissioners in the United States and Canada, and a guide to the major colleges and universities offering professional training in conservation careers.

An extremely useful reference volume for public officials, government employees, secretaries, teachers and citizen conservationists, the 1969 "Conservation Directory" can be ordered for $1.50 prepaid, from the National Wildlife Federation, 1412 16th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036. The "Directory" is compiled and published by the National Wildlife Federation as a conservation education service.

Washington, D.C.--State affiliates of the National Wildlife Federation are preparing for the annual observance of National Wildlife Week, March 16-22. Chairman in each of the 50 states will be receiving materials describing the 1969 Wildlife Week theme "Provide Habitatplaces where wildlife live." A key item in the campaign will be the full color poster especially commissioned for the annual conservation event. It represents three major habitat areas, forests, fields and water and the wildlife they support.

Executive Director of the National Wildlife Federation, Thomas L. Kimball emphasized the importance of the habitat theme by saying "it is time to stop measuring our nation's program just be numbers of airports, shopping centers and superhighways and start keeping an account of the waters we clean-up, the trees we plant and the natural areas we protect or restore."

National Wildlife Week is a grass roots effort which is promoted by conservation organizations, sportsmen's clubs, civic groups, state and national resource agencies and youth groups across the country. It has been an annual event since 1938 and is the largest conservation observance of its kind.

Many Missourians became alarmed last year when the state paid out over $90,000.00 in bounties. The State comptroller had asked the Senate Appropriations Committee for an extra $25,000.00 to finish out the fiscal year. However this year brought an all time record of over $122,000.00 to finish out the fiscal year. However this year brought an all time record of over $122,000.00 spent for bounties, mainly for coyotes.

There is still much concern about animals brought in from other states, particularly Kansas, for Missouri bounty payments. Kansas pays a $2.00 coyote bounty, Missouri a tantalizing $15 per scalp. Bounty hunters may not always know the difference between a coyote or a wolf or even a dog but they never seem to have trouble collecting the highest bounty. A look at the total county reports in Missouri shows the counties bordering Kansas paying the most bounties. During 1967 a bill to eliminate bounties passed the Senate but never received action in the House Committee.

The saddest part of the story is that Missouri has one of the best predator control programs in existence, sometimes called the trapper extension program. Operated by the State Conservation Department (which does not indulge in bounty payments or philosophy) this system is taking care of the problem predator with a modest budget.

Because New Yorkers were such wiseacres, New York City was called Gotham by Washington Irving in "Salmagundi Papers," 1807. The World Almanac says. Gotham is an English town whose people were once famous for feigning foolishness. When King John wanted to build a palace there the Gothamites, fearing the costs of a royal court, acted so stupidly that the king willingly left. Thereafter it was said: More fools pass through Gotham than live there.

SERVING THE STUDENTS, FACULTY AND STAFF OF SIKESTON HIGH SCHOOL SINCE 1936

Grapplers Begin Season Many Students Participate

ONE OF THE most exciting and promising sports on the SHS calendar this year, as in years past, is wrestling. This sport has all the qualities necessary for an interesting and thrilling sport

Basis of any squad is the wrestling team and coach. Sikeston high schol has both of these. This year's matmen outnumber any other year with many contenders in each weight class.

Boys who participate in wrestling spend much time practicing holds, escapes, muscle-building exerciss, and often dieting.

Competition within the team makes these boys work even harder to reach the much-sough goal. "Wrestle-offs" are held before each wrestling meet. Grapplers challenge team members of their weight class to attain their rank in the team.

Wrestling coach also makes a great difference in the squad's performance. Coach John Brooke takes an active interest in each individual grappler. Working toward perfection, coach Brooke spends a great deal of time with these boys, and is often the inspiration for a prized win.

Time put in practicing is evident when the team is in competition with area teams. Actual wrestling matches are thrilling to observe. The individual win as well as team victory is important in grappling. A student who is looking for an action-packed sport, one of strength and endurance, should attend these meets.

This sport is not just for boys and parents, but many girls would find watching it enjoyable too. Wrestling moves quickly from the beginning whistle throughout the three periods. During this wrestling season, SHS grapplers are going all the way to the top, so Sikeston high students give them YOUR support!

FINISHING TOUCHES are now being added to the field house. First home game will be played here Feb. 7, against Dexter.

Home Game Soon

SHS Field House Opening Set For Early February

Sikeston high school field house is scheduled to open next month. Long-awaited date of the opening of the ultra-modern structure is set for the opening home basketball game against Dexter, Friday, Feb. 7.

Work on the roof is nearing completion with approximately half of the work finished on the final overlay.

Roofing is a new type named Rubberiod T-NA200. This is a white covering with a texture similar to oilcloth.

Cupola at the top of the structure serves as housing for the ventilation and is also used for decoration.

Inside, a circle-shaped concrete floor features one-tenth mile track around the outside of the basketball court. Floor of the court is of a new type, called Tartan.

Dimensions of the gigantic structure feature 46,000 square feet in the auditorium. Lobby has 2700 square feet.

Auditorium has a diameter of 200 feet. Height at the highest of the dome is 46 feet.

Dome-shaped ceiling features steel girding with 106 mercury lights, illuminating the area.

Four-sided scoreboard, which can be viewed from any place in the auditorium, is boosted to the top-center of the dome.

Lobby features walnut paneling and a terrazo floor. Four ticket windows flank the front entrances. Trophy cases and concession stand are also outstanding points of the modern designed lobby.

Fire-proof structure features eight exits which lead directly to the outside. Emergency power system is available to operate in case of a power failure.

Buchmueller-Whitworth and Associates were the architects, and Gilbert Construction Co. of St. Louis acted ascontractors.

DECA Members Sponsor Party

Distributive Education Clubs of America members held a Christmas party in December at the home of COE coordinator Gerald Jackson.

Theme of Christmas was carried out in the decorations. Large Christmas tree was the center of attraction and candle-lighted tables added to the festive air.

Students provided records for dancing and table tennis and other activities were also provided.

Red Peppers Receive Honor

Sikeston high school cheerleaders received the cheerleading trophy during the Bloomfield Christmas Tournament.

Trophy was given to the cheerleaders for their enthusiastic sportsmanship, appearance, and overwhelming support for the Bulldogs.

Malden, Richland, Oran, Dexter, and Kennett were among the towns that competed for the trophy.

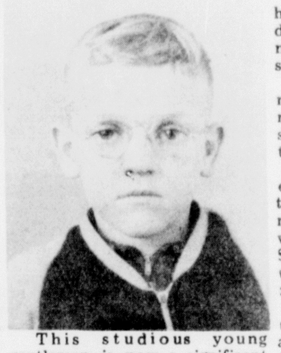
Sikeston high school's cheerleaders are Beth Montgomery, head cheerleader, Tonja Thompson, Phyllis Ford, Cheryl Perry, Linda Powell, Susan Dawson, Connie Sullivan, and Barbara Faulkner.

Guess Who?

Probably the first words this young miss said, were "Merry Christmas." Born on Christmas Day has been one of her pet peeves since early childhood.

Miss X has dark hair and is a bright-eyed junior girl.

Among Miss X's activities are Red Peppers, band, choir, and Honor Society.



This studious young gentleman is now a significant part of Sikeston high school.

In the daily schedule any student or member of the faculty can find this personality going about his very important business.

His active interest in football and track make him a very valuable asset to the athletic program of the school.

One of his favorite past-times is helping Red Peppers officers spell out words on the football field.

Mr. X resides with his wife and three children on Marion Street.

Second Semester Classes Assume Studies Thursday

Re-Scheduling Of Classes Underway: Several Courses Available To Students

Students of second semester classes in Sikeston high school will begin their studies Thursday morning.

Seven new courses will be offered to students enrolled in one-half unit courses or to those who have dropped classes.

A new program, cadet teaching, is being offered to senior girls who have an interest in the teaching profession.

Personal analysis, directed by counselor Mrs. Helen Reuber, is offered to seniors.

This course includes a study of behavior of the individuals, personality, basic needs, defense mechanisms, and mental health. Purpose of the course is to give the student a better overall picture of himself.

Basic values and the development of each student's philosophy will be stressed.

Family living, a course instructed last year, will be taught by Mrs. Hemba Young.

Main topics in this course are the family as a unit of society, family-life cycle, pressures affecting family living, families in other cultures, and marriage as a partnership.

Sociology, directed by John Brooke, includes a self-study of how the individual fits into society.

Advanced sewing and home decoration classes will be instructed by Mrs. Helen Calhoun. Purpose of the classes is to give girls more experiences and knowledge in sewing and homemaking.

Economics and conservation will also be offered the second semester.

A new program will be initiated this semester involving seniors who are considering education as a possible career.

These students will be allowed to act as aides in various Sikeston schools for two hours each day.

Students enrolled in single-semester courses must choose new subjects for the second semester that begins Thursday morning.

English Classes Publish Annual Literary Work

Entries for the second annual edition of the Sikeston high school student anthology may be submitted to students' English teachers until the deadline set by a committee of teachers.

Final deadline will be Friday, Feb. 28, and material may be either prose or poetry suitable for publication.

Work will be selected for publication on the basis of originality, interest, and application of principles of good writing.

Entries must be typed, double-spaced, and on one side of the paper only. Proper margins should be used. The maximum length is four pages, and shorter works are preferred.

On the first line of the entry, the title should be typed in capital letters; on the line beneath should be typed the student's name, a dash, and the class the student is in (freshman, sophomore, junior, or senior). A line should be skipped preceding the composition.

Teachers' names, classes, and class hours should be attached to the entry on a separate piece of paper.

Entries may be compositions turned in as class assignments, or they can be compositions written especially for the anthology.

Second Semester Begins; What Does Future Hold?

AS THE FIRST SEMESTER comes to a close, the time comes for many students to take account of what they have accomplished the past 18 weeks.

Difficult decisions begin to face members of all classes, especially the seniors.

For seniors this is the final semester of their high school years. They must look seriously toward their future. They must decide which college they plan to attend or what occupation they plan to follow.

Seniors must realize that they are not just preparing for another year; they are preparing for a new and different kind of life.

By planning time well, organizing, and developing good study habits, seniors can better prepare themselves for the unexplored world of next year.

Juniors have all the activities to look forward to that are now becoming happy memories for seniors, such as the Red Pepper offices, football and basketball games, homecoming and student body elections.

To sophomores and freshmen it just means one less semester to worry about and that they have finally become acquainted with the customs and rules of Sikeston high school.

Seniors, remember, only 93 school days until graduation; use them wisely and make plans for the future.

Computer Turns on Canadian Teens

By NOEL GROVE
NEA Staff Correspondent

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia—(NEA)—Marching bravely into the unknown, Graham Fernley, 15, Calvin Piggott, 15, and John Ballam, 14, all of Halifax, entered the world of zonk, clatter and skretch. They came out not only wiser, but happier as well.

The two ninth-graders and one eighth-grader shot craps against a computer (Calvin had mythical winnings of $2,000 piled up before he blew it all on a final roll), fidgeted through a lecture on the glories of Educational Video Reproduction, and then blew their minds on Datacom. The latter is a computerized keyboard setup that briefs students on a subject, quizzes them, and even issues little typed-out congratulations when they do well.

Their opinions were unsolicited and unheard among the educational prophets and soothsayers who had met here for three days of the first International Conference on Communications Media in Education. There is, after all, a certain inevitability about tomorrow's computerized classroom and television lecture.

However, some people raise the question as to whether the new wizardry isn't becoming the giant toy of today's past-oriented educators, played against a backdrop of tomorrow's eager young citizenry.

Psychologists and social commentators are already exploring the effects of home television on the first generation to grow up having always been exposed to its influence.

As for computers themselves, a rather frightening tale was told privately at the conference by a Canadian telephone company representative. Some women operators, he said, had developed nervous symptoms after finding themselves talking back to computerized voices that they knew perfectly well were recordings.

dial-a-computer system that can work mathematics for the impatient student in a matter of seconds.

The three teen-agers entered with gusto into the arena of electronic wizardry displayed at the educational media conference. They operated the Datacom system so long and so religiously that by late afternoon Calvin was giving impromptu demonstrations to passersby in the temporary absence of salesmen of the Maritime Telephone Company. Datacom is designed to be operated over telephone lines.

But even he had some reservations.

"When the novelty wears off," he said, thoughtfully, "it could have some disadvantages. Learning like this would be all right for brains, but how about the guy who has trouble? Would the computer stop and find out why?"

That, argue the innovators, is where the teacher steps in.

Graham pondered why it seemed easier to learn things using a computer and, with all the seriousness of an educational researcher decided.

In the educational world, such warnings are mostly lost in the blissful clatter of automated keyboards, the skretch of remote blackboard receivers, the zonk of a touch-tone

"When a teacher is just standing up there telling you something, it can put you to sleep. But when you have to push the buttons yourself to learn it with a computer, you have to stay on your toes."

"Yes," admitted John, loser to a machine that day in a fast-multiplication contest, "it would be great to have a school with these gadgets in it."

For Graham, the greatest triumph of the day came in his own session with Datacom. He had started by pecking out a timorous "hello" on the keyboard to activate the computer, which paused as though sizing him up before clattering out a response. It then proceeded to type out a short lecture on the science of combustion and gave him a quiz on the material presented.

Graham grew bolder, more mischievous as the relationship progressed, but the machine took it in stride. "You're putting me on," it chided him once as he punched out an answer that was clearly illogical. As usual, it was right.

Ann Landers

Husband Lays Law Down To His Lending Wife

Dear Ann Landers: A close friend has been borrowing my clothes for the past five years. Mitzi can afford to buy what she needs, but she says my taste is better than hers and when she wants to look smashing she feels more confident in my clothes than in her own.

We are exactly the same size, and Mitzi is a very neat girl but I don't care how careful a person is -- it's impossible to return a dress or a pair of shoes in the exactly the same condition. A seam goes here, a bead comes off there, a knitted skirt snags, a patent heel gets scratched -- something is bound to happen.

Mitzi has borrowed everything from my evening bag to my wig. I have never borrowed anything from her.

Last night I went to put on my best cocktail dress and Mitzi had the shoes that match it. My husband was furious. He gave me orders never to lend her anything again. How can I say no without losing her friendship? I can't tell her my husband has given me orders, can I? What excuse can I give? -- BIG HEARTED BERT

Dear Bert: You don't need an excuse. Just tell Mitzi you've decided not to lend your clothes any more. Leave your husband out of it. Offer to shop with her occasionally since she likes your taste. If your refusal to lend her your clothes terminates the friendships, you haven't lost much.

Dear Ann Landers: I was interested in the letter from the woman who insisted that alcoholism "runs in families" and is therefore an inherited illness. She went on to say all her husband's brothers are drunks. The only one in the family who doesn't touch the stuff is his sister. Then she added, "Charlotte is a religious nut. A couple of drinks might improve her personality a lot."

What this world needs is fewer boozers and more religious nuts. I am sick to death of being with bright people who proceed to pickle their brains in alcohol the minute the sun goes down. It's a sad sight to witness a charming woman who suddenly talks gibberish, laughs too loud and makes a complete fool of herself. I've seen too many brilliant men become repetitious, belligerent and vulgar after three drinks. It's sickening.

The pity of it is that these people imagine liquor improves their personality when nothing could be further from the truth. At the risk of being called a Blue Nose for the millionth time will you say it again? I can't put words together the way you can. -- STAR WITNESS

Dear Star: Thanks for your testimony. There's nothing wrong with the way you put words together, dear. You spoke the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

What awaits you on the other side of marriage veil? How can you be sure your marriage will work? Read Ann Landers' booklet "Marriage -- What To Expect." Send your request to Ann Landers in care of your newspaper enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing, a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Keep Records Of Non-Resident Dependant Costs

ST. LOUIS -- If you claim as a dependent someone not living with you, you must keep good records of the support you provide, advises Mr. E. P. Trainor, District Director of Internal Revenue for Missouri.

Failure to keep these records caused some taxpayers to lose a dependency exemption they otherwise would have been entitled to last year. For others it meant the problem of assembling the needed records months after the expense was paid.

Mr. Trainor said that there are five tests that have to be met to satisfy the legal requirements for claiming another person as a dependent. The one that gives taxpayers the most trouble is the support test, he added. Substantiation of support is the most common problem arising on returns filed each year.

To satisfy the support test, the taxpayer must show what it cost to support the dependent for the year and how much of this he provided. To gather such records for a child who does not live at home or a parent in another city is naturally more difficult than it is for a dependent who lives with the taxpayer.

Mr. Trainor said the fourth other dependency tests are the gross income test, member of household or relationship test, citizenship test and joint return test. All are explained in the Form 1040 instructions.

Mr. Trainor requested that all Federal tax returns be filed as soon as possible directly with the Internal Revenue Service Center, 2306 East Bannister Road, Kansas City, Missouri 64170.

Wife Takes Exception With Husband's Single Label

THE CASE OF THE SINGLE HUSBAND
By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Bert was a promoter with more irons in the fire than a blacksmith. When his various deals suddenly began to mature all at the same time, he not only made a great amount of money, but he became living proof that a person doesn't have to die to become famous.

In fact, while much was said about him, one magazine wrote an entire article about his climb to success. In publishing the article, however, the magazine made one little mistake. It reported that Bert was a bachelor ! to which his wife took tearful exception. Taking time out from dabbing her eyes, she sued the magazine for libel.

"If the public thinks that my husband is a bachelor," she complained to a judge, "it doesn't take a mind reader to guess what they think I am. The exposure has ruined my composer to say nothing of my reputation."

"That's ridiculous," retorted the attorney for the magazine. "How could she be libeled when she wasn't even mentioned in the article? Since nary a word was said about her, she obviously has no basis for her complaint."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you consider the bachelor label a libel on Bert's wife?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! He held that since there was no reference to Bert's wife in the article, but dealt only with Bert, she was not libeled; that nothing defamatory was written about her. As for Bert, the judge concluded, he wasn't libeled either since there is nothing wrong or immoral with being a bachelor.

No Cure Yet For Gum Disease

This is the second in a series of six articles on dental health published by The Daily Standard, in observance of National Children's Dental Health Week, February 2-8.

"My dentist tells me that I have a mild case of gum disease, and the only treatment he has recommended is regular toothbrushing after meals. Isn't there any type of cure for this disease?"

Although dental scientists have devoted a great deal of study to gum disease, no cure is yet available. Essentially, prevention is the key in controlling gum disease, and the regular toothbrushing your dentist has recommended is one of the most effective ways to prevent and control mild cases of gum disease.

Dental plaque -- the slimelike substance that forms on teeth -- is one of the principal factors in gum disease. Plaque contains bacteria which attack the teeth and cause caries. In addition, this substance, as it clings to the tooth, often becomes mineralized. This hardened substance, calculus, irritates the gums and causes them to recede from the source of irritation.

As the gums recede from the calculus, they also leave spaces, or pockets, between the gums and the teeth where bacteria and debris collect. This leads to further irritation and the possibility of infection. Thus, gum disease is a continuing process and, if left untreated, eventually destroys the gums and bones around the teeth. The result is that the teeth become loose and are lost.

While gum disease accounts for the greatest amount of tooth loss in adults, it also affects children. According to the American Dental Association, approximately one in five children has some form of gum disease, and, of course, the longer a person has this disease, the greater his chances of losing his teeth.

Even if the disease has made considerable progress, your dentist can often control it through regular cleaning of the teeth to remove plaque and calculus. The dentist also may perform a gingivectomy -- surgical removal of diseased tissue -- in order to halt the disease's progress.

However, this type of treatment cannot rebuilt the destroyed tissue, and the dental patient must take excellent care of his oral tissues to prevent the disease from recurring.

Again, the best method of prevention is regular toothbrushing after all meals to prevent plaque from forming on the teeth. This, combined with regular visits to the dentist for removal of any deposits which have formed, will help to prevent gum disease or to halt its progress.

Burlison Takes Floor First Day

Freshman Congressman, Bill D. Burlison (D-Mo.) of the 10th Congressional District became the first freshman congressman of the 91st Congress to be recognized by the Speaker of the House of Representatives for debate on the floor of the House today.

The issue that Burlison spoke about concerned the "unfaithful elector" of North Carolina who cast his vote for American Independent Party candidate, George Wallace, although the state went in the Nixon column.

Burlison argued that even though the elector may have been morally bound to vote for President-elect Nixon, there was no such legal obligation, and his vote for Wallace should be counted.

The new Congressman from Cape Girardeau made it clear that he opposed the electoral college system and he noted that on the first day of the session he had introduced legislation providing for popular election of the President.

In conclusion, Burlison stated, "Let us not approach the problem Piccemea as here proposed. Instead, let us in this first session of the 91st Congress discharge our full responsibility by starting the surn of the wheels which will mean amendment to our Constitution and elimination of the inocuous electoral college system."

Both the House and the Senate defeated the effort to change the ' unfaithful elector's" vote.

Flurry of New Bills Introduced

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) - Members of both houses in the Missouri Legislature jumped up with new bills Thursday as introduction was opened up immediately after Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' budget message.

The appropriation bills to carry out a $1.3 billion record budget, in fact, were offered even before the governor addressed a joint session of the House and Senate. They were the first House bills.

First bill in the Senate was by Sen. A. Basey Vanlandingham, D Columbia, to increase state aid under the school foundation program by $35 million a year for each of the next four years.

By that time, Vanlandingham said, state and local money for school operations would be on a 50-50 basis as pledged by the Democratic governor in his campaign. Both parties have endorsed this idea.

The second bill in the Senate touched a sensitive legislative spot. It would repeal outright the motor vehicle inspection law which just went into effect.

Sen. John E. Downs, D- St. Joseph offered the measure. Many legislators have said their constituents are up in arms about the new law.

Downs said it should be repealed immediately to "stop the frauds which a small percentage of inspectors are perpetrating on the people. He said an immediate repeal would give the legislature time to consider other legislation in this field during the current session

A constitutional amendment proposed in the Senate would permit the legislature to have annual sessions and allow the legislature to set its own time for convening and adjourning.

Another proposal for Constitutional change would put women on the same basis as men as far as jury duty is concerned.

Saigon Rates '68 Enemy Losses at 191,307 Men

SAIGON (AP) - The South Vietnamese government claimed today 191,307 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops were killed in 1968, nearly six times allied losses.

But North Vietnam called 1968 "the best year so far in the Vietnamese people's struggle against U.S. aggression."

The Saigon government put South Vietnamese losses last year at 17,486 killed. The U.S. Command has not released official figures for the year, but American battle deaths through Dec. 28 were 14,521.

Despite its claim of heavy losses suffered by the enemy, the government in a yearend review estimated total enemy strength at 300,100 Viet Cong, North Vietnamese and political cadre. It claimed 151,000 North Vietnamese troops had infiltrated the South in 1968 - an assessment vastly differ.at from unofficial U.S. estimates of 225,000 to 230,000 men.

The U.S. Command does not publish official estimates of enemy strength, but reliable American sources said the South Vietnamese estimate was considered "high."

In addition to those killed in action, the Saigon government said the enemy lost 21,050 men taken captive and 17,597 who defected under the "Open Arms" program. This accounted for a total enemy manpower loss of 229,954 last year, the government said.

However, it claimed that all but 20,900 of these men were replaced by the enemy command.

But the report said the average battalion of Communist troops now is operating at half-strength and "their fighting capability is now very limited compared with that of their battlations in 1967."

Viet Cong gunners zeroed in on the airfield outside Can Tho, in the delta, a delta airfield at Sco Trang; an American artillery base near the Cambodian border northwest of Saigon, and a South Vietnamese regimental headquarters at Quang Ngai airfield in the far northern warn zone.

None of the attacks did much damage or caused serious casualties.

The U.S. Command said 60 mortar and bazooka shells raked the asphalt tarmac and the frame administration buildings of Binh Thuy airfield, just outside the main delta city of Can Tho, before dawn. One South Vietnamese soldier was killed and a few American and government wounded were reported, but officers said the shells failed to hit any planes or helicopters in sandbag shelters.

Bond Vote Set At East Prairie

EAST PRAIRIE - The City Council has called a $675,000 bond issue election to pay for improvements to the water and sewer systems. The election will be held Jan. 24.

The ordinance approved by the council calls for issuance of $375,000 in general obligation bonds and $300,000 in revenue bonds.

Water system improvements planned include a new well and pump and a water treatment plant plus purchase and installation of water meters. The new well will permit the city to place on a standby basis three old wells located at the water tank, one of which has been condemned by the State Health Department. The well is allegedly too close to a sewer line, and as a result of its continued use the "approved water supply" signs have been removed from the East Prairie city limits.

The treatment plant will be used to remove iron, mud and manganese which are present in city water.

Sewerage system improvements planned it the bond issues are approved would include: new and larger compressors at existing lift stations; extension of sewer mains to parts of the city not now served and installation of a lift station to serve a new addition.

City officials said $66,000 of the bond issue funds will be used to pay off an earlier bond issue. They say this action is necessary before new revenue bonds may be issued.

Officials report that a net increase of 25 cents on the $100 assessed valuation will be needed in the city tax rate to pay for the general obligation bond issue. Revenue bonds, if approved, would be retired by an increase in the water rate from $3 per month to about $5.50 per month.

A CITY SPOKESMAN said the city had tired to get federal aid to cover part of the cost of the improvement, but had twice been unsuccessful. The spokesman said the city council decided it would be dangerous to wait any longer in view of the present overloaded condition of the sewerage lift station compressors.

Recovery Signs Contract

Sikeston Recovery Inc. Thursday gave unanimous approval to a motion authorizing chairman W. Raymert Miller to sign a contract on behalf of the corporation with Urban Development Corporation of Cape Girardeau.

The contract is the first of a series of steps needed to construct 50 to 100 homes for persons with low incomes.

The Urban Development Corporation is a professionally staffed corporation, which has offered and completed similar package deals in other towns. If they representative signs the contract, and tentative agreement had been reached before yesterday's meeting, then they will investigate and survey Sikeston for an appropriate site and determine the number of units to be constructed. All decisions must be approved by Recovery Inc., the non profit sponsor of the FHA-financed project.

After site selection and the number of units most desirable is determined, application for financing must be made to FHA. Urban Development Corporation will serve as both counselor and contractor for the project, if allowed by FHA.

If not, the Urban Development Corporation has indicated, it will find another contractor who will provide his own financing in the interim between actual construction and receipt of FHA financing.

The package deal, which is not supposed to cost Recovery or the city of Sikeston anything, was decided upon after a contract committee of Recovery investigated Urban Development Corporation.

Charles Mitchell, Charles Matthews and Don Fulton made up the committee and recommended the contract approved by the organization.

Pre-fabricated homes have been considered for the project. Top quality pre-fabricated materials are the only type that would be allowed with FHA financing, Matthews said.

Two, three and four-bedroom units are being considered. A lease-back option is expected to be applied to each unit, whereby the renter can receive rent supplement from the federal government. But if the renter's income increases, he will not be forced to vacate. Rather, he can make bigger payments per month, and buy the house.

The program is known as 221 (d3) of the Federal Housing Act.

Other matters at the meeting Thursday included the formal approval of trading two lots in Sunset for two other lots owned by Recover. The lots were on the same block.

Recovery has four homes under construction in Sunset. It has been instrumental in the construction of two new houses completed in the area, which were financed by Kendall Sikes. It also was instrumental in the remodeling of two homes, which was financed by Charles Mitchell.

LBJ Wants Company in Urging Surtax Extension

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Minority Leader Everett M. Dirksen says President Johnson wants the 10 per cent income surtax extended, but "he would like some company" in recommending it to Congress.

Three were indications Thursday Johnson wants President-elect Nixon to join him in the recommendation so the issue would not become the political controversy it was before Congress passed the surtax, at Johnson's request, last year.

The surtax expires June 30. It was originally imposed as an anti-inflation measure.

House Minority Leader Gerald R. Ford, said he understood Johnson was prepared to make a statement about the surtax in his State of the Union message or budget request, and that Nixon would then issue a statement of his own.

House Majority Leader Carl Albert said, however, the White House had received no word from Nixon Thursday afternoon.

Dirksen told newsmen Thursday that Johnson has drawn up a tentative budget of $196 billion for the fiscal year starting July 1, an increase of $10.6 billion over current federal spending.

But the Illinois Republican said the $195 billion was a ' base figure" which could be changed, depending on whether Johnson decides in favor of recommending the surtax extension.

Dirksen said congressional leaders were told at a White House meeting revenues would total about $198 billion during the year if the surtax were extended, and Johnson's tentative budget would allow for a $3 billion surplus.

In New York, a spokesman for Nixon said the President-elect had no comment.

Field House Dedication Date is Set

BY L.L. SCHADE

Sikeston School Superintendent Lynn Twitty warned the board of education yesterday that it will be a "tight squeeze" to finish this school year without additional funds.

Twitty, in the regular monthly board meeting, said income from now until the end of the school year is status quo and an increase in expenses will have to come from transfer of funds possibly earmarked for the building fund.

He also pointed out that inflation has added five per cent increases in expenses in many school accounts.

Assessed valuation in the Sikeston district last year was increased $300,000, but this does not meet the needs of increased school operational costs, Twitty explained.

"We must find some method of additional revenue and act immediately," Twitty said. "Our beginning teaching salaries have been set at $5,300, and these must be raised with the regular staff be given an open-end contract which would permit salary increases, if funds are available for the coming school year."

It is hoped the new legislature will find means of raising the additional funds for the 1969-70 school year, Twitty said.

The board set Feb. 7 for the dedication of the new $800,000 field house. It consist of 31,000 feet in floor sapce to make the largest such structure between St. Louis and Memphis. It will have a seating capacity for more than 5,000 persons.

Several celebrated sports figures have been invited for the occasion and a banquet will be given in the school cafetorium at 5:30 p.m. The first section of bleachers have arrived and are being installed this week.

The board was emphatic that no vandalism would be tolerated, as well as students running their vehicles on prohibited school grounds Any violator will have his license revoked if found guilty.

Since the school lunch program was given a cost reduction on certain food items, the board said that a reduction of four cents per meal will be made for students.

Approval of expenses in the following funds were allowed for the past month; incidental fund $15,759.26; building fund, $4,375.69, and free text book fund (given annually) for $40,250.30.

Most of the board members stated they would attend annual Missouri School Board association and the Missouri Association of School Administrators meetings to be held in Columbia, Jan. 20-2 1

News Briefs

Dixon Defies Call to Resign

WASHINGTON (AP)—Paul Rand Dixon says he has no intention of resigning the chairmanship of the Federal Trade Commission as urged by law students who did a critical study of the agency under the direction of Ralph Nader.

At a news conference Thursday, Dixon said the report calling for his resignation is "a hysterical, antibusiness diatribe and a scurrilous, untruthful attack."

The report was issued Sunday after a summer-long investigation of the FTC. The students were organized by Nader, a critic of the auto industry and government agencies.

Nader could not be reached for comment on Dixon's rebuttal.

Among the accusations of the students was one that Dixon personally suppressed a report criticizing auto manufacturers for their warranty practices. Dixon called this a "blatant lie."

Another Venus Shot Launched

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union today launched an unmanned space probe toward Venus designed to make a soft landing on the night side of the planet.

An official announcement said the craft, Venus 6, would operate in conjunction with Venus 5, launched five days ago.

Today's launching is the first known Soviet attempt to land an object on the night side of Venus.

The Soviet Union pioneered interplanetary contract when Venus 4 reached the distant planet Oct. 18, 1967.

The two new craft are expected to make the 155 million-mile trip by mid-May.

Tass said Venus 6 is designed to make a "smooth descent in the Venus atmosphere."

The equipment aboard will carry out "Scientific explorations together with Venus 5," Tass said.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

THE PUEBLO PROBE

The timing of a Navy court of inquiry into all aspects of the seizure by North Korea of the intelligence ship PUEBLO remains vague. Once a thorough debriefing has been completed, the 82 survivors will receive a short furlough. Then they will be subject to one of the most sensitive probes in naval history.

Convening the court does not carry an implication that the crew and Commander Lloyd M. Bucher were guilty of wrongdoing while captives of the North Koreans. Adm. John J. Hyland, Pacific Fleet commander, who authorized the court, is quoted as telling the crew: "You are regarded as a group of young heroes and we are very proud of the way you stuck it out for such a prolonged period." The crew was released Dec. 23, exactly 11 months after their ship was captured.

But the PUEBLO case, with its "confessions" and new disclosures of North Korean brutality in treatment of prisoners, could result in reexamination of the rules of behavior for American military men taken prisoner. The rules are embodied in a six-points "Code of Conduct for Members of the U. S. Armed Forces." President Eisenhower promulgated the rules in an executive order of Aug. 17, 1955, after inquiries had established that North Korea and Red China had "brainwashed" many U. S. prisoners and induced some to become defectors.

In less sophisticated days, when the Geneva Convention was an honored document, the formula followed by all nations was that prisoners of war were required to give them "name, rank, and serial number" -- and nothing more. But in the aftermath of the Korean War, 565 former American POWs were investigated for allegedly collaborating with the enemy. According to reports at the time, thousands more had given their captors more than the three basic items of information.

Of 4,428 Americans who survived their captivity in the Korean War, 21 became turncoats, refusing repatriation. And 192 of the returnees, in the words of the U. S. Advisory Committee on Prisoners of War, were found "chargeable with serious offenses against comrades or the United States." Only a few were courtmartialed, and the charge against them was for "aiding the enemy" -- an offense which verges on treason.

President Eisenhower's code, advisory but not binding, adds "date of birth" to name, rank and serial number. It further states: "I will evade answering further questions to the utmost of my ability. I will make no oral or written statements disloyal to my country and its allies or harmful to their cause."

Commander Bucher in his well-publicized press statement at Panmunjom on Dec. 23 said: "We went through a harassment period there that was never-ending -- continued repetition on charges against us which eventually, of course were admitted to by myself in order to save some people from some fairly serious misfortune."

The plight of the PUEBLO crew has been described by London's DAILY SKETCH, which notes that they were beaten and bullied by the North Koreans. "Now they are to be interviewed by intelligence officers and psychiatrists in their own country," says the newspaper. "For years they may be watched and very probably they will be periodically vetted (quizzed). However slight, there will always remain the risk that members of the crew may have been brainwashed into becoming potential traitors to their own country." The British paper makes the point that all this is through no fault of their own, and comments: "What a treacherous world we live in."

That's a lot of pedaling - A survey revealed that more than 6,300 miles of marked bicycle routes have opened throughout the country in the last five years and that the mileage would possibly reach 10,000 by 1969. California has plans for a bicycle route 600 miles long, connecting San Diego to Oregon, and plans are underway for a tri-state Bikeway, linking Ohio, Indiana and Pennsylvania. Wisconsin opened a 320-mile, cross- state Bikeway in 1966 as one of the state's important tourist attractions.

THE DAY AFTER ELECTION

One of the most hotly-contested issues before the last session of Congress was the complusory gun registration bill. The Administration proposed such legislation and thousands of Americans wrote or wired their objections to Congress. The Congress responded by defeating all gun registration bills. The only gun bill passed in the session was one restricting interstate and mail-order sales of firearms.

But on November 6 - the day after the Federal elections - announcement of a Federal gun registration edict was made in Washington, Congress notwithstanding. What bureaucrat presumes to impose such regulations? Believe it or not, the Collector of Internal Revenue.

In the Federal Register for November 6, 1968, Volume 23, No. 217, the Internal Revenue Service served notice that it is prepared to enforce new rules on reporting the sales of ammunition and firearms. Under the new rules, any person buying firearms or ammunition from a dealer will have to report his name and address, height and weight, place and date of birth, and provide identification. Further, the rules will empower the regional reports from all dealers on the names and addresses of every person who buys firearms or ammunition.

Thus, every firearm, and every purchase of ammunition, will be a permanent record in the files of the Internal Revenue Service. And that is gun registration by bureaucrat, in defiance of the clearly expressed will of the Congress of the United States.

It will be more difficult to arouse public opinion on the issue now, because those citizens who screamed last summer have relaxed in the belief that the Congress rejected gun registration. And it did. But the frightening fact is that the Internal Revenue Service is prepared to do, on its own, what the Congress refused to make the law of the land.

Delusions of grandeur are not unknown among bureaucrats. But no manifestation has been so conspicuous as this travesty. It is a bad joke. And unless Congress has become a joke, it will quickly correct the Federal Register for November 6, 1968.

An American Petroleum Institute publication observed that the domestic petroleum industry is faced with the task of producing 64 billion barrels of liquid petroleum between 1965 and 1980 while maintaining adequate reserves. This has been determined by a new U.S. Department of the Interior study which concludes that oilmen must step up their rate of petroleum discoveries and achieve greater efficiencies in recovering oil already discovered, if future petroleum requirements are to be satisifed.

For most of the independent business proprietors, 1968 will go down as the year of "the big squeeze".

The squeeze came as inflation pushed overhead costs up on the one hand and business owners fought to achieve offsetting higher sales in the face of keener competition for the customer's shrinking dollar after taxes on the other hand.

"Doing more business but making less money" sums up the volunteer comments made by independent merchants and professionals in answering the National Federation of Business' survey of more than 260,000 members. While 84 per cent of the respondents reported higher prices on goods they purchased for resale, and 81 per cent had higher payroll costs, only 54 per cent showed improved gross revenue. In a year of unbridled inflation, one of every five independents saw revenue drop, and almost one-fourth said it was unchanged from a year earlier.

The prevailing hope now among these independent small businessmen is that the new Administration will act on many problems which endanger small and independent business. Namely, one would permit a business to plow back more money into its operations before the Federal income tax bite; the other would encourage location of new business enterprises in rural and economically-depressed areas. Surveys show business in rural areas and farm states are particularly hard-pressed in view of lower prices on farm products.

There is no question that Big Government has been rough in its treatment of small, independent businesses when it has forced them to the same standards applied to Big Business in minimum wages and higher taxes.

According to Mr. C. Joseph Stetler president of the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, prescription drugs take only 9.8 cents of the health care dollar -- compared to 11.7 cents in 1957. Clearly, the pharmaceutical industry's products are succeeding in protecting health and reducing the cost of illness. This is a fine performance at a time when all other prices are surging upward.

TORTURE SHOWS VALIDITY OF PUEBLO'S MISSION

It would be wonderful to think that the release of the 82 surviving members of the crew of the USS Pueblo in time for Christmas was a gesture of good will toward men on the part of the North Koreans, a sign that the spirit of the season, which is not an exclusive Christian possession, had permeated even behind the Bamboo Curtain.

Unfortunately, the tales the men have recounted of 11 months of brutal treatment, verified by their debilitated physical condition, preclude any such assumption.

Perhaps it is enough just to be thankful that all of the men but one, who was killed at the time the ship was seized, are alive and in fair health. Their bodies will quickly recover from the ordeal under the loving care of their grateful families, though the invisible mental scars they bear may be another matter.

The United States paid a price for their release by signing an apology for the intrusion of the Pueblo into North Korean waters. It has no more validity than the confessions tortured our of accused witches in the Middles Ages, which is about as far as the Asian Communists have progressed on the scale of civilization.

The experience of these men at the hands of the North Koreans is sufficient demonstration of why they had to be where they were when they were captured.

Missouri's Motor Vehicle Inspection Law officially became effective this month. Car owners are required to have their vehicles inspected within 30 days prior to registration. Inspections are made of brakes, lighting equipment, signaling devices, steering mechanisms, horns, mirrors, windshield wipers, tires, exhaust system, glass, air pollution control devices, and any other equipment required by the State. Proof of ownership is also required at the time a vehicle is presented for inspection.

A certificate of inspection and approval will be affixed to the lower left hand corner of the windshield if the vehicle meets all the requirements of inspection. The cost of the inspection is $2.50. If the vehicle is rejected, the vehicle owner will be provided with a receipt that the fee has been paid and a list of the defects. The owner may remove the vehicle to any place of his own choice or he may repair the vehicle himself. He has 15 days in which to correct any defeats. If the defects are corrected and the vehicle returned to the station that made the original inspection within ten days, no addition fee will be charged. Should the vehicle owner decide to have the repairs made at the inspection station, a written estimate of the costs for such repairs must be given to the vehicle owner who must sign an authorization before any repairs can be made.

Colonel E. I. (Mike) Hockaday, the Superintendent of the Missouri Highway Patrol, noted that the motor vehicle inspection program is an important part of the State's total traffic safety effort. He encouraged vehicle owners to develop a preventive maintenance program for their vehicles so as to assure that the safety devices on the vehicles are properly operating at all times.

FREE LOVE

There is a lot of argument about the morals of today. Some insist that morals have declined greatly. Others claim that this generation is no worse than generations past, and that the only change is one of more openness about sex and other matters. In any event, one of the expressions that has found its way into our vocabulary is "free love." In common usage, the phrase has come to mean promiscuity.

But the U.S. Supreme Court has brought a new form of "free love" into existence. The court says that a woman and her lover of the moment may engage in a continuing affair without fear of losing her ADC subsidy. ADC, of course, is Aid to Dependent Children.

Some 18 states and the District of Columbia were under the impression that if a man was living in the house with a mother they had the right to assume that he was picking up the tab for the family. That, it now appears, is an archaic concept, although a few state welfare agencies have indicated that they will not bow to the Court's ruling. Arkansas' welfare commissioner, Len Blaylock, says that the will continue to ban these sex-subsidies until specifically required to conform. At issue is the 80 percent of such ADC payments which comes out of Washington, while the individual states pay only 20 percent. Presumably Washington would cut off the 80 percent payment to any state which failed to conform to the Court's ruling. At the moment, it appears that a number of states will balk until test cases bring decisions specifically applicable to each individual state.

A few years ago a New Jersey welfare official was chastised for daring to suggest that women on welfare rolls who bore illegitimate children should be prosecuted under the state's laws against premarital and extramarital relations. Like many other state officials he was wrestling with the problem of the women who keep turning up on welfare rolls with newborn dependent children, and who received increase welfare checks as the brood increass. They couldn't do better if they were unionized. How many unions can negotiate a new contract every 9 months?

It is estimated that the Supreme Court's free love ruling may increase the number of children on relief roles by as much as 15 percent.

THE REVOLUTION IN PANAMA

Recently the Panamanian government of Arnulfo Arias was overthrown, and Arias was forced to flee. This was the third time that an Arias government had been forcibly removed from office. This time, he had governed for only eleven days. The obvious instability of Panama proves that we should not surrender our sovereignty over the Canal Zone to this country.

The Panama Canal is essential to our security and to the commerce of the world. This vital transportation artery must be controlled by a stable government. Panama cannot provide this stability.

Upon being overthrown, Arias fled for refuge to the Canal Zone itself. If the treaty he had worked for had been signed last year, this territory would not have been a refuge for him.

If such a treaty were ever signed, Panamanian instability would be likely to increase.

The draft treaty provided that management and defense of the canal would be the responsibility of a commission on which Panama would lack only one vote of having a majority. Operation of the canal, especially its revenue, would become a leading issue in Panamanian politic. We could be sure from one year to the next what kind of policies would be advocated by Panama.

The tolls of the Panama Canal need to be kept as low as possible to facilitate world commerce. Yet these tolls could easily become an issue in Panamanian elections search party promised to raise the tolls to increase government revenues.

Panamanian governments have lacked the stability to govern their country properly. They should not be given authority over the Canal Zone. HLH

Washington - Merry Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON SAY: Gov. Hickel of Alaska appeared to have a conflict of interest; Maurice Stans has had experience in transferring administrations; he is a big game hunter

WASHINGTON -- President-elect Nixon's counsel, John D. Ehrlichman, is making a painstaking, conscientious effort to detect conflicts of interest among new Nixon appointees before they take office. He has prepared a black loose-leaf notebook with careful instructions for every top appointee to guard against conflicts.

One instruction reads: "The appearance of a conflict could be just as embarrassing to the Administration and the cabinet appointee as an actual conflict."

We suggest that both Mr. Ehrlichman and the senate interior committee, which shortly will examine the qualifications of Walter J. Hickel to be secretary of the interior, take a good look at the operations of Mr. Hickel's plumbing and heating company while Hickel was -- and still is -- Governor of Alaska.

They will find that the Hickel company was able to get a subcontract for the plumbing and heating for the Anchorage Airport despite the fact that it was not originally the low bidder. The work involved about $1,00,000.

The overall work on the Anchorage Airport was being bid for four general contractors who had asked for bids on the heating and plumbing by subcontractors. The lowest bidder with three of the companies and reportedly with the fourth was C. R. Lewis, who operates an Alaskan plumbing and heating firm of long standing.

When Mr. Lewis was questioned on the telephone in Anchorage, he was hesitant about discussing the bids.

"I'm a Republican state senator," he said, "and Hickel is the Republican Governor. It's a bit sticky for me."

Pressed further, he explained:

"There were four general contractors bidding and with three of them my company was low. With the fourth they said we were not low, that the Governor's firm was low. This was last May or June.

"For weeks we couldn't get the figures out of them. We couldn't find out who was low bidder. With the other companies we had no trouble. We got the figures right away. But with the fourth we just ran up against a blank wall, and in the end the Governor's firm got the subcontract. We heard our bid was thrown out on a technicality."

The interesting point is why a firm belonging to the Governor of Alaska was bidding on a government contract at all. A further point is: will his companies continue to operate in Alaska, a state over which he as secretary of the interior will have control of about 8- per cent of the land?

-LAIRD COMMANDS-

Just before Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill., was elected to succeed Rep. Mel Laird, R-Wis., as chairman of the House Republican conference, Laird, wielding the gavel for the last time, exhorted colleagues:

"Put your ballots in the box, gentlemen. Let's hurry it up a little. We're wasting time."

"Now, just a minute, Mel," ribbed Rep. John Ashbrook, R-Ohio. "You haven't as yet become the new Secretary of Defense. You're not talking to a bunch of Generals."

-JUNIOR INAUGURAL BALL-

There's going to be a dividend to the inaugural balls commemorating the beginning of the Nixon administration. One day later, Jan. 21, the Republican inaugural committee will turn over the big ball room at the Sheraton-Park Hotel to 2,000 high school students, most of them Negro, for an "after inaugural ball."

Mark Evans, veteran TV commentator and executive, who is chairman of the inaugural ball committee, conveived the idea as a means of inspiring good citizenship in the nation's capital.

"These are the kids who will be the future leaders of the capital," says Evans. "We're letting them run the ball. We're merely leaving the decorations, all the trimmings and giving them a little guidance. Someday they'll be inaugurating a president of their own."

-SMOOTH TRANSFER-

The experts all agree that no outgoing administration in this century has cooperated so carefully with a new administration for a smooth transfer of government as that of President Johnson. But there is one man in the Nixon administration, Secretary of Commerce Maurice Stans, who chalked up something of a record in 1960.

When Kennedy was taking over from Eisenhower, Stans, the director of the budget, prepared "position papers" regarding every point of the Democratic platform, in order to help the new Democratic administration carry them out.

He also prepared 70 memos for the Kennedy administration on various government agencies and their problems, detailing exactly what certain programs were doing and what they were costing.

Stans is dominated by two passions - stalking big game in Africa and stalking government waste in Washington.

On his African safaris, Stans has bagged enough big game to stock the children's nature museum of Rock Hill, S. C., with jungle trophies and to outfit his wife in Leopard-skin coat, Zebra hat, shoes, purse, and a lion-skin handbag.

The son of an immigrant Belgian house painter who was also Koncert-Meister of the town's brass band, Stans grew up in the farming village of Shakopee, Minn., where he learned to toot the saxophone. When he left Shakopee, he took with him his sax plus $151 he had earned playing it for a local dance band.

He studied accounting at night at Northwestern University, supported himself by day as a stenographer. He now ends up in the cabinet.

Poor Richard: Going Rate for Kings and Queens makes U.S. appear a Piker

Washington, D.C.: -- A crown it is that seldom kings enjoy, according to a well-placed source close to the late Henry VI. But not for want of petty cash. The going rates for emperors and kings, dukes and queens, is far better than the commoner, Richard Nixon, will get.

This column did a swift survey of the going rates for heads of state and it's obvious that we are shortchanging our presidents. Even at $200,000 a year, President Nixon will be receiving some $66,000 less than Grand Duke Jean of Luxembourg.

Obviously Mr. Nixon, as a plebeian, is running far behind the crowned heads of Europe. He may want to continue his wooing of American labor by asking for a federal union charter for himself.

Those Scandinavian kings obviously have a royal local of some kind. Denmark's Frederik IX Norway's Olav V and Sweden's Gustavus VI Adolphus average about $645,000 annually. The Danish monarch appears to be a better collective bargainer. He has a cost-of-living escalator cluase written into the statue on the regal stipend.

But he does have to care for a castle or two -- one of which, Elsinore by name, does pretty well, as tourists come in search of the melancholy Dane.

Apparently there's a better going rate for queens. The total royal allowance for Her Majesty, the gracious Elizabeth of Britain, comes to $1,140,000. On this allowance she does maintain a palace or two. But Prince Charles is no burden. Next November, when he turns 21, he'll inherit an income of some $480,000.

From the Netherlands embassy comes word that the Dutch queen receives some $1.4 million annually. The largesse in the Hague shames us. The queen was getting but $6,00,000 until recently. Then, not only was the allowance increased, but it was hiked retroactively.

And right next door in Blegium, King Baudouin I receives $840,000 annually. He too has a cost-of-living escalator arrangement. When the king was a bachelor, his income was lower -- $720,000 a year. A romantically generous constition allows him another $120,00 to care for his new queen.

Young King Constatine II did not do badly before the putsch. He received $600,000 annually, but there was always the palace. There is some doubt now whether or not he is receiving his money in absentia. But it's worth noting that the going rate for royalty in Athens was better than $11,000 a week.

And then there is the Emperor of Japan. The Japanese, who may get a bit proletarianly tumultuous and temperatmental in the streets, respect their monarch. Just about a year ago, they raised his income from $189,000 to $233,000 a year because of rising prices. It all sounds more awesome in Japanese currency -- 84 million yen now, compared with 68 million in 1967. And you do get more for your yen than for the dollar if you know where to buy.

With this income, Emperor Hirohito must care for Empress Nagako and Crown Prince Akihito. And that fascinating palace and those magnificent horses.

And then there is the nervous "little king," Jordan's Hussein. When in Hebron recently, I inquired of some substantial citizens. The king has a large personal fortune. But he's not keeping it in Anman these days. His tiny kingdom gives him $140,000 annually. Compare this with Mr. Nixon's $200,000 and the $100,000 of past presidents.

It's not always easy to learn the pay scales of monarchs. Embassies are horrified by curious questioners.

At the Libyan embassy, for example, because of the new wealth, I asked after the pay of King Mohammed Idras el Senussi. The lady was shocked that anyone would ask. But it does run close to a million a year I hear.

At the Iranian embassy, they were friendlier. The Persians always are. When I asked about the shah, I was told I would have to be satisifed with "it is a considerable amount."

When I tried either the missions or emabssies of such royal kingdoms as Cambodia, Kuwait, Morocco, Nepal and Saudi Arabia, I could have frozen a martini on the iciness. Other kingdoms, such as Afghanistan and Thailand, were surprised, horrified and unnerved that anyone should think in terms of paying a king.

But out of all this came one certainty -- Americans, judging by what other peoples do for their first families, are mighty chinchy with ours.

Children and Their World of Play

GRETCHEN MYERS, three year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Myers, Canalou, stands on her train going one way.

BY MARGARET DuBOIS

Adults sometimes have a tendency to say, "now when I was a kid..." Children are children and always have been. Hickory switches may not be as popular today as they once were, and the toys are more sophistocated, but boys still like mechanical toys and girls stick close to baby dolls and buggies.

Due to smaller families and newer ideas, most children receive more individual attention from their parents. The favorite time allotted for this seems to be in the evening when the toddlers are tucked in and the older children can sit quietly while the parents read to them or just discuss the happenings of a busy day.

Even with modern time-saving devices for mothers, they still don't have time to sit and play with the children. Television is a new discovery for children when they reach the age of three and and can appreciate the shows designed for their entertainment. The games and toys designed for educational purposes fun are also take up several hours of fun each day. Most children have a wide variety of toys, and can pick and choose until they have found something interesting.

But like always, give a child a string and a box, and their imagination can conjure up a million things to do with them.

Of course, kids are in revolt in every generation, but at least our generation's mothers made us wash before we protested.

The Gospel Visitor

"What The Mission Of The Church Is Not."

Last week in our lesson on "the mission of the church." We emphasized that the church is a divine arrangment with a divine mission, showing, from Ephesians 4:11-12 that its mission goes in three directions. And as far as I know the church has no other mission on earth than: preaching the gospel, ministering to certain ones, edifing itself. But because some have failed to see this and has engaged the church, (in some areas), in other activity, it is necessary that we consider a lesson "what the mission of the church is not." With hopes that all will study these matters and realize the seriousness envolved, in failing to respect God's pattern for His church. (Heb. 8:105). (1) The mission of the church is not social, while the gospel contains some social implications, as far as the Christian is concerned, the gospel is not social. Example: A Christian is obligated to feed a hungry neighbor a needed meal - as well as teach him the gospel. But the ultimate purpose of the gospel is to save man from his sins that he might go to heaven. I understand Jesus' conception of the church to have been totally spiritual when He told Pilate that His kingdom was not of this world. (John 18:36). It would be irreconcilable with this spiritual concept of the church, to envision the kingdom of the Lord, sapping its strength groping about trying to cope with the manifold social injustices in the kingdoms of men...Problems which the church of the Lord cannot began to solve if it expends the last ounce of its energy exist. If Christ intended for His church to solve the world problems of poverty, delinquency, starvation, the helpless aged and the homeless orphans. He not only gave the church a problem to solve far beyond its ability, but indeed, the whole so-called "Christian world" has not touched the hem of the garment. The gospel of Christ is not a "social gospel," the church of the Lord is not a "social institution." While the gospel with its principles of everlasting truth, will work social reform, it does so by reforming the individual's manner of living and thinking. If you desire to get the individual. Paul taught, if Christianity found a man either slave or master, it was to make a better one out of him (1 Cor. 7:20-22). He also taught, that the home is to be the center of social activity -- not the church. (1 Cor. 11:20-22) The church did not undertake social reform or social guidance, in the days of the apostles. (2) It is not the business of the church to provide and serve as guide in recreational activity. Church basketball teams, ping-pong games, skating parties and swimming parties and the like are a perversion of the resources and mission of the church. (3) Making money is not the function of the church. (5) Political issues do not belong in the church. God ordained civil government to meet all such issues and resolve them. (Romans 13:1-7; 1 Peter 2:13-17). There are many more things which do not belong in the church and its mission, but space will not permit to list all of them. However, no man has the right to prostitute the energy, strength, zeal or resources of the church of our Lord to serve human airms or purposes.

Mizzou Hopes to Cure League Win Illness

COLUMBIA - Missouri's basketballers, fighting off a two-game Big Eight Conference illness run into rampaging Kansas Saturday here--hardly the type of prescription any doctor would recommend.

The Tigers still are looking for their first Big Eight victory after narrow-margin defeats at Oklahoma State and Oklahoma. They'll be the underdogs again Saturday in Brewer field house against the Jayhawks, tied for the Big Eight lead with Kansas State and Colorado at 2-0.

"It's good to get home but this game really will be a challenge to us," Tiger coach Norm Stewart remarked as he tried to regroup his forces for the first of two successive home games. The Tigers are 4-0 in Brewer this season.

Stewart hopes his team can bounce back from the two heartbreaking defeats --61-60 in overtime to the Cowpokes and 62-58 to the Sooners. Kansas has routed Iowa State 94-61 and nipped Nebraska 56-52.

The Jayhawks stand 13-1 for the season and are boasting a 12-game winning streak. The nation's fifth-ranked team is only three victories away from becoming the first college basketball entry in history to register 1,000 victories.

If K. U. keeps rolling, victory number one-grand will come against arch-rival Kansas State on Jan. 18 at Manhattan -- which also will be the collegiate finale for Jayhawk all-American and Olympic hero Jo Jo White.

White, a mid-year graduate, will be winding up his career after three seasons as the Big Eight's premier backcourt performer. White scored a career high 28 points against the Tigers here last year.

The Jayhawks. 12 - game winning streak is their longest in 12 years -- dating back to the Wilt Chamberlain days of 1957. Kansas' longest winning streak, however, is 23, set in 1935-36.

Stewart doesn't plan any lineup changes but notes his Tigers again will be looking up to a predominantly - taller Jayhawk outfit. Mizzou's tallest starter will be 6-6 center Chuck Kundert. Kansas will counter with Roger Brown (6-10) at center and sophomore Dave Robisch (6-9) at forward.

Don Tomlinson (6-4) still leads the Rigers' scoring chartwith a 16.6 average with all-Big Eight tournament guard Dave Pike (5-11) next in line at 14.2. Theo Franks (6-2) has an average of 10.6 and the team's other starter Doug Johnson (6-5) stands at 10.2.

The Tigers' next game will be a regionally-televised conference test on Jan. 18 here against Iowa State.

Kansas' all-American JoJo White will be honored by the Tiger Tail-Twisters during the Missouri - K. U. basketball game here Saturday night.

The group, made up of Mizzou fans who sit together behind the Tigers' bench, will present a plague to White honoring him for his part in the United States Olympic basketball team's successful Gold medal quest. A similar award is planned when the team's coach, Henry Iba of Oklahoma State comes here on Feb. 8.

Sikeston Upset By Central In Area Wrestling Rival

BY TERRY NOWELL

CAPE GIRARDEAU - Cape Central Tigers struggled to take a 27-19 win over the Sikeston Bulldog wrestlers last night. Sikeston's junior varsity squad also took a loss as they were defeated by the Tigers, 21-18.

This marks Sikeston's second loss of the season against no wins and the junior varsity squad's first loss as they previously defeated Charleston, 33-13.

Sikeston had a few boys out with sickness and were forced to involve some inexperienced boys in the match. Bulldogs lost a few close vital matches which may have been the major factor in the team's loss.

The battle started as Sikeston's Jeff Porter was defeated by Taylor, 10-9, in the 95-pound class. In the 103-pound class, Henry Gross won his first match of the season as he defeated Central's contender, Baker.

Terry Nowell lost his first match as his undefeated 112-pound contender, Conner, edged by 2-0. This battle and those of the Bulldogs' Gary Robey, Randy Reynolds, and Jeff Porter were matches that Sikeston came very close to winning, but resulted in a big contribution to Sikeston's loss.

Central's Kirchoff defeated Jim Welch, by a pin, in the 120-pound class of competition. Cliff Morris took his second loss of the season as he was pinned in the third period by Cape's Buster.

First year wrestler Kent McKinly, was pinned in the second period by Central's 165-pound competitor, Kasten.

Sikeston's 165-pound defending champion defeated Pigg by a pin in the first period in the 180-pound class.

Heavyweight wrestler, Willie Savage, pinned Cape's Boston in the third period of action.

In the junior varsity match, wins were received by Tom Robey, Larry Mike Lambert, and Mike Fansler from Sikeston.

Other junior varsity wrestlers who participated in the match were Tom Robey, Larry McMillan, Ughe Howard, Larry Marshal, Buddy Vaughn, and Steve Long.

Sikeston is scheduled to take part in the annual Tri-State Invitational Tournament at Charleston tomorrow. This competition will involve an expected eight teams from Missouri, Illinois, and Kentucky.

MONTREAL AP - Sponsors of Loyola College's fourth annual centennial hockey tournament say they would like to include a European country-hopefully the Soviet Union - in the 1970 meet.

They said "every available resource" would be used to encourage Russia to send a representative university to the games, including an offer of a return series of games in Russia during the Christmas school break in 1970. Eight Canadian and U. S. schools participated in this year's meet, won by the University of Toronto Blues over the weekend.

Eagles - Pirate Clash Top Match

The Oran Eagles, led by a power-packed starting five, have streaked to a 16-0 record this season and are the only unbeaten cagers in the district.

Coach Gene Bess' squad embarks on its second road game of the week tonight when it goes to Matthews and seemingly will have a clear road ahead until regional time if it meets the Pirates test.

Winners of two tournament titles, the Eagles have beaten back all threats rather handily throught its first half schedule and have eliminated top teams in each class in doing so.

Oran hopes to avenge one of its three losses it suffered last season in tonight's meeting with the Pirates, who eliminated the Eagles in the finals of the Class M regional at Illmo-Scott City to advance through the state bracket for the M title. It's other two losses, both to Scott County Central, already have been avenged.

The Pirates have struggled since Christmas, having won one game and lose one. It comes into tonight's encounter 11-2.

This encounter tops the district's schedule.

Matthews also has a little avenge to take out on the Eagles as it suffered its only loss of last season to the Oran quintet in the regular scheduled meeting.

Tonight's schedule:
Illmo-Scott City at Puxico
Qulin at Naylor
Bernie at Clarkton
Risco at Parma
Bell City at Richland
St. Henry's at College High

projects during fiscal 1969.

As noted in a recent story in U. S. News & World Report, "Hunting — a Big Business that's Getting Bigger", the Pittman-Robertson funds have been largely responsible for the comeback of the deer and wild turkey populations which once were nearly extinct.

The amount was apportioned to the Missouri Department of Conservation as the state's share of the federal aid in fish and wildlife restroation programs, better known as the Pittman-Robertson and Dingell-Johnson acts.

The funds came from excise taxes on fishing equipment and sporting firearms and ammunition, occasionally called "the nation's only popular taxes". Suggestions by the federal government that these excise taxes be discontinued have brought quick reactions from sportsmen who want them retained.

Missouri ranked thirteenth among the states in the total funds apportioned for 1969, seventh in Dingell-Johnson funds for fisheries at $239,817, and fourteenth in Pittman-Robertson funds for wildlife with $745,349. The funds are apportioned on the basis of a

The story estimates that there are nearly 20 million hunters in the United States and that they spent more than $1.1 billion in a single year on guns, ammunition, dogs, licenses, transportation and guides. "Not covered are such costs as motel bills."

The P-R fund's value is indicated by the magazine's statement, "Today's abundance of game of many tupes constitutes a major success in conservation. Even with the wildlife habitat increasingly reduced by turnpikes, housing, and shopping centers, conservation practices are keeping wildlife population at a high level."

In Missouri it has provided $8,267,068 for wildlife research and land acquisition since 1939. Nationally it totalled $30,320,000 this year and almost $325 million in 30 years.

The Dingell-Johnson Act, which finances the bulk of Missouri's fisheries research and some land acquisition and development for lake sites, was begun in 1950.

Ron Jaynes' Sports Corner

Our mystic bulb is jumping with news of the future . . . so here's your look at tonight's basketball action:

ORAN AT MATTHEWS — If you had earlier consulted this corner about this game we might have thought Matthews had a chance . . . but not now. Oran 79, Matthews 60.

BELL CITY AT RICHLAND — Ray Fisher's Rebels are on the move and won't be bothered by tonight's opponent. Richland 83, Bell City 55.

ILLMO-SCOTT CITY AT PUXICO — It's a long trip to Puxico from Rams headquarters . . . but it'll be an even longer one with the defeat to take back. Puxico 68, ISC 50.

BERNIE AT CLARKTON — This could be a close match. Bernie will have to be up and ready for the Reindeer, who can make it tough on the home woods, but we'll say . . . Bernie 59, Clarkton 46.

ST. HENRY AT COLLEGE HIGH — The Preps will have little trouble tonight . . . Shall we say more. College High 71, St. Henry 59.

ADVANCE AT BLOOMFIELD — The Wildcats deliberate type of game failed to work in its tournament against the Hornets and we fret to think what would happen if it ran with them . . . No chance. Advance 71, Bloomfield 55.

KENNETT AT JACKSON — This will be a toughie for both clubs as the conference games make both teams that much determined. We'll go with the Indians . . . Kennett that is . . . Just because of its experience gained this season. Kennett 66, Jackson 58.

CHAFFEE AT EAST PRAIRIE — The Red Devils had a little trouble in its most recent game . . . scoring. It had better sharpen those eyes because the Eagles are improving by each week. Chaffee 63, East Prairie 55.

PERRYVILLE AT CAPE CENTRAL — Now here's a toughie . . . Both teams thrive on defense . . . and we see a defensive deadlock . . . Overtime is the call . . . Perryville 68, Cape Central 65.

GIDEON AT KELLY — The Bulldogs are fresh from upsetting Lilbourn while the Hawks are fresh from almost recording an upset. We see . . . Gideon 69, Kelly 59.

PORTAGEVILLE AT NEW MADRID — We pass . . . O well . . . The Indians home court advantage is 10 points to its credit, but the Bulldogs have made the turn and seem toughning up. Portageville 57, New Madrid 49.

For the 14th consecutive year the National Wildlife Federation has published the "Conservation Directory," the most comprehensive listing of government and private conservation and natural resource organizations and their personnel.

The "Directory" contains sections listing Federal and State agencies, citizen groups on a national and state level, as well as regional and international organizations concerned with natural resources. Other "Conservation Directory" features include a section on Congressional committees related to conservation interests, a listing of the fish and game commissioners in the United States and Canada, and a guide to the major colleges and universities offering professional training in conservation careers.

An extremely useful reference volume for public officials, government employees, secretaries, teachers and citizen conservationists, the 1969 "Conservation Directory" can be ordered for $1.50 prepaid, from the National Wildlife Federation, 1412 16th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036. The "Directory" is compiled and published by the National Wildlife Federation as a conservation education service.

Washington, D.C.—State affiliates of the National Wildlife Federation are preparing for the annual observance of National Wildlife Week, March 16-22. Chairman in each of the 50 states will be receiving materials describing the 1969 Wildlife Week theme "Provide Habitatplaces where wildlife live." A key item in the campaign will be the full color poster especially commissioned for the annual conservation event. It represents three major habitat areas, forests, fields and water and the wildlife they support.

Executive Director of the National Wildlife Federation, Thomas L. Kimball emphasized the importance of the habitat theme by saying "it is time to stop measuring our nation's program just be numbers of airports, shopping centers and superhighways and start keeping an account of the waters we clean-up, the trees we plant and the natural areas we protect or restore."

National Wildlife Week is a grass roots effort which is promoted by conservation organizations, sportsmen's clubs, civic groups, state and national resource agencies and youth groups across the country. It has been an annual event since 1938 and is the largest conservation observance of its kind.

Many Missourians became alarmed last year when the state paid out over $90,000.00 in bounties. The State comptroller had asked the Senate Appropriations Committee for an extra $25,000.00 to finish out the fiscal year. However this year brought an all time record of over $122,000.00 to finish out the fiscal year. However this year brought an all time record of over $122,000.00 spent for bounties, mainly for coyotes.

There is still much concern about animals brought in from other states, particularly Kansas, for Missouri bounty payments. Kansas pays a $2.00 coyote bounty, Missouri a tantalizing $15 per scalp. Bounty hunters may not always know the difference between a coyote or a wolf or even a dog but they never seem to have trouble collecting the highest bounty. A look at the total county reports in Missouri shows the counties bordering Kansas paying the most bounties. During 1967 a bill to eliminate bounties passed the Senate but never received action in the House Committee.

The saddest part of the story is that Missouri has one of the best predator control programs in existence, sometimes called the trapper extension program. Operated by the State Conservation Department (which does not indulge in bounty payments or philosophy) this system is taking care of the problem predator with a modest budget.

Because New Yorkers were such wiseacres, New York City was called Gotham by Washington Irving in "Salmagundi Papers," 1807. The World Almanac says. Gotham is an English town whose people were once famous for feigning foolishness. When King John wanted to build a palace there the Gothamites, fearing the costs of a royal court, acted so stupidly that the king willingly left. Thereafter it was said: More fools pass through Gotham than live there.

SERVING THE STUDENTS, FACULTY AND STAFF OF SIKESTON HIGH SCHOOL SINCE 1936

Grapplers Begin Season Many Students Participate

ONE OF THE most exciting and promising sports on the SHS calendar this year, as in years past, is wrestling. This sport has all the qualities necessary for an interesting and thrilling sport

Basis of any squad is the wrestling team and coach. Sikeston high schol has both of these. This year's matmen outnumber any other year with many contenders in each weight class.

Boys who participate in wrestling spend much time practicing holds, escapes, muscle-building exerciss, and often dieting.

Competition within the team makes these boys work even harder to reach the much-sough goal. "Wrestle-offs" are held before each wrestling meet. Grapplers challenge team members of their weight class to attain their rank in the team.

Wrestling coach also makes a great difference in the squad's performance. Coach John Brooke takes an active interest in each individual grappler. Working toward perfection, coach Brooke spends a great deal of time with these boys, and is often the inspiration for a prized win.

Time put in practicing is evident when the team is in competition with area teams. Actual wrestling matches are thrilling to observe. The individual win as well as team victory is important in grappling. A student who is looking for an action-packed sport, one of strength and endurance, should attend these meets.

This sport is not just for boys and parents, but many girls would find watching it enjoyable too. Wrestling moves quickly from the beginning whistle throughout the three periods. During this wrestling season, SHS grapplers are going all the way to the top, so Sikeston high students give them YOUR support!

Second Semester Begins; What Does Future Hold?

AS THE FIRST SEMESTER comes to a close, the time comes for many students to take account of what they have accomplished the past 18 weeks.

Difficult decisions begin to face members of all classes, especially the seniors.

For seniors this is the final semester of their high school years. They must look seriously toward their future. They must decide which college they plan to attend or what occupation they plan to follow.

Seniors must realize that they are not just preparing for another year; they are preparing for a new and different kind of life.

By planning time well, organizing, and developing good study habits, seniors can better prepare themselves for the unexplored world of next year.

Juniors have all the activities to look forward to that are now becoming happy memories for seniors, such as the Red Pepper offices, football and basketball games, homecoming and student body elections.

To sophomores and freshmen it just means one less semester to worry about and that they have finally become acquainted with the customs and rules of Sikeston high school.

Seniors, remember, only 93 school days until graduation; use them wisely and make plans for the future.

Main topics in this course are the family as a unit of society, family-life cycle, pressures affecting family living, families in other cultures, and marriage as a partnership.

Sociology, directed by John Brooke, includes a self-study of how the individual fits into society.

Advanced sewing and home decoration classes will be instructed by Mrs. Helen Calhoun. Purpose of the classes is to give girls more experiences and knowledge in sewing and homemaking.

A new program will be initiated this semester involving seniors who are considering education as a possible career.

These students will be allowed to act as aides in various Sikeston schools for two hours each day.

Students enrolled in single-semester courses must choose new subjects for the second semester that begins Thursday morning.

English Classes Publish Annual Literary Work

Entries for the second annual edition of the Sikeston high school student anthology may be submitted to students' English teachers until the deadline set by a committee of teachers.

Work will be selected for publication on the basis of originality, interest, and application of principles of good writing.

Entries must be typed, double-spaced, and on one side of the paper only. Proper margins should be used. The maximum length is four pages, and shorter works are preferred.

On the first line of the entry, the title should be typed in capital letters; on the line beneath should be typed the student's name, a dash, and the class the student is in (freshman, sophomore, junior, or senior). A line should be skipped preceding the composition.

Entries may be compositions turned in as class assignments, or they can be compositions written especially for the anthology.

Final deadline will be Friday, Feb. 28, and material may be either prose or poetry suitable for publication.

Computer Turns on Canadian Teens

By NOEL GROVE
NEA Staff Correspondent

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia—(NEA)—Marching bravely into the unknown, Graham Fernley, 15, Calvin Piggott, 15, and John Ballam, 14, all of Halifax, entered the world of zonk, clatter and skretch. They came out not only wiser, but happier as well.

The two ninth-graders and one eighth-grader shot craps against a computer (Calvin had mythical winnings of $2,000 piled up before he blew it all on a final roll), fidgeted through a lecture on the glories of Educational Video Reproduction, and then blew their minds on Datacom. The latter is a computerized keyboard setup that briefs students on a subject, quizzes them, and even issues little typed-out congratulations when they do well.

Their opinions were unsolicited and unheard among the educational prophets and soothsayers who had met here for three days of the first International Conference on Communications Media in Education. There is, after all, a certain inevitability about tomorrow's computerized classroom and television lecture.

However, some people raise the question as to whether the new wizardry isn't becoming the giant toy of today's past-oriented educators, played against a backdrop of tomorrow's eager young citizenry.

Psychologists and social commentators are already exploring the effects of home television on the first generation to grow up having always been exposed to its influence.

As for computers themselves, a rather frightening tale was told privately at the conference by a Canadian telephone company representative. Some women operators, he said, had developed nervous symptoms after finding themselves talking back to computerized voices that they knew perfectly well were recordings.

dial-a-computer system that can work mathematics for the impatient student in a matter of seconds.

The three teen-agers entered with gusto into the arena of electronic wizardry displayed at the educational media conference. They operated the Datacom system so long and so religiously that by late afternoon Calvin was giving impromptu demonstrations to passersby in the temporary absence of salesmen of the Maritime Telephone Company. Datacom is designed to be operated over telephone lines.

But even he had some reservations.

"When the novelty wears off," he said, thoughtfully, "it could have some disadvantages. Learning like this would be all right for brains, but how about the guy who has trouble? Would the computer stop and find out why?"

That, argue the innovators, is where the teacher steps in.

Graham pondered why it seemed easier to learn things using a computer and, with all the seriousness of an educational researcher decided.

In the educational world, such warnings are mostly lost in the blissful clatter of automated keyboards, the skretch of remote blackboard receivers, the zonk of a touch-tone

"When a teacher is just standing up there telling you something, it can put you to sleep. But when you have to push the buttons yourself to learn it with a computer, you have to stay on your toes."

"Yes," admitted John, loser to a machine that day in a fast-multiplication contest, "it would be great to have a school with these gadgets in it."

For Graham, the greatest triumph of the day came in his own session with Datacom. He had started by pecking out a timorous "hello" on the keyboard to activate the computer, which paused as though sizing him up before clattering out a response. It then proceeded to type out a short lecture on the science of combustion and gave him a quiz on the material presented.

Graham grew bolder, more mischievous as the relationship progressed, but the machine took it in stride. "You're putting me on," it chided him once as he punched out an answer that was clearly illogical. As usual, it was right.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: A close friend has been borrowing my clothes for the past five years. Mitzi can afford to buy what she needs, but she says my taste is better than hers and when she wants to look smashing she feels more confident in my clothes than in her own.

We are exactly the same size, and Mitzi is a very neat girl but I don't care how careful a person is -- it's impossible to return a dress or a pair of shoes in the exactly the same condition. A seam goes here, a bead comes off there, a knitted skirt snags, a patent heel gets scratched -- something is bound to happen.

Mitzi has borrowed everything from my evening bag to my wig. I have never borrowed anything from her.

Last night I went to put on my best cocktail dress and Mitzi had the shoes that match it. My husband was furious. He gave me orders never to lend her anything again. How can I say no without losing her friendship? I can't tell her my husband has given me orders, can I? What excuse can I give? -- BIG HEARTED BERT

Dear Bert: You don't need an excuse. Just tell Mitzi you've decided not to lend your clothes any more. Leave your husband out of it. Offer to shop with her occasionally since she likes your taste. If your refusal to lend her your clothes terminates the friendships, you haven't lost much.

Dear Ann Landers: I was interested in the letter from the woman who insisted that alcoholism "runs in families" and is therefore an inherited illness. She went on to say all her husband's brothers are drunks. The only one in the family who doesn't touch the stuff is his sister. Then she added, "Charlotte is a religious nut. A couple of drinks might improve her personality a lot."

What this world needs is fewer boozers and more religious nuts. I am sick to death of being with bright people who proceed to pickle their brains in alcohol the minute the sun goes down. It's a sad sight to witness a charming woman who suddenly talks gibberish, laughs too loud and makes a complete fool of herself. I've seen too many brilliant men become repetitious, beligerent and vulgar after three drinks. It's sickening.

The pity of it is that these people imagine liquor improves their personality when nothing could be further from the truth. At the risk of being called a Blue Nose for the millionth time will you say it again? I can't put words together the way you can. -- STAR WITNESS

Dear Star: Thanks for your testimony. There's nothing wrong with the way you put words together, dear. You spoke the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

Keep Records Of Non-Resident Dependant Costs

ST. LOUIS -- If you claim as a dependent someone not living with you, you must keep good records of the support you provide, advises Mr. E. P. Trainor, District Director of Internal Revenue for Missouri.

Failure to keep these records caused some taxpayers to lose a dependency exemption they otherwise would have been entitled to last year. For others it meant the problem of assembling the needed records months after the expense was paid.

Mr. Trainor said that there are five tests that have to be met to satisfy the legal requirements for claiming another person as a dependent. The one that gives taxpayers the most trouble is the support test, he added. Substantiation of support is the most common problem arising on returns filed each year.

To satisfy the support test, the taxpayer must show what it cost to support the dependent for the year and how much of this he provided. To gather such records for a child who does not live at home or a parent in another city is naturally more difficult than it is for a dependent who lives with the taxpayer.

Mr. Trainor said the fourth other dependency tests are the gross income test, member of household or relationship test, citizenship test and joint return test. All are explained in the Form 1040 instructions.

Mr. Trainor requested that all Federal tax returns be filed as soon as possible directly with the Internal Revenue Service Center, 2306 East Bannister Road, Kansas City, Missouri 64170.

Wife Takes Exception With Husband's Single Label

THE CASE OF THE SINGLE HUSBAND
By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Bert was a promoter with more irons in the fire than a blacksmith. When his various deals suddenly began to mature all at the same time, he not only made a great amount of money, but he became living proof that a person doesn't have to die to become famous.

In fact, while much was said about him, one magazine wrote an entire article about his climb to success. In publishing the article, however, the magazine made one little mistake. It reported that Bert was a bachelor ! to which his wife took tearful exception. Taking time out from dabbing her eyes, she sued the magazine for libel.

"If the public thinks that my husband is a bachelor, " she complained to a judge, "it doesn't take a mind reader to guess what they think I am. The exposure has ruined my composer to say nothing of my reputation."

"That's ridiculous," retorted the attorney for the magazine. "How could she be libeled when she wasn't even mentioned in the article? Since nary a word was said about her, she obviously has no basis for her complaint."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you consider the bachelor label a libel on Bert's wife?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! He held that since there was no reference to Bert's wife in the article, but dealt only with Bert, she was not libeled; that nothing defamatory was written about her. As for Bert, the judge concluded, he wasn't libeled either since there is nothing wrong or immoral with being a bachelor.

No Cure Yet For Gum Disease

This is the second in a series of six articles on dental health published by The Daily Standard, in observance of National Children's Dental Health Week, February 2-8.

"My dentist tells me that I have a mild case of gum disease, and the only treatment he has recommended is regular toothbrushing after meals. Isn't there any type of cure for this disease?"

Although dental scientists have devoted a great deal of study to gum disease, no cure is yet available. Essentially, prevention is the key in controlling gum disease, and the regular toothbrushing your dentist has recommended is one of the most effective ways to prevent and control mild cases of gum disease.

Dental plaque -- the slimelike substance that forms on teeth -- is one of the principal factors in gum disease. Plaque contains bacteria which attack the teeth and cause caries. In addition, this substance, as it clings to the tooth, often becomes mineralized. This hardened substance, calculus, irritates the gums and causes them to recede from the source of irritation.

As the gums recede from the calculus, they also leave spaces, or pockets, between the gums and the teeth where bacteria and debris collect. This leads to further irritation and the possibility of infection. Thus, gum disease is a continuing process and, if left untreated, eventually destroys the gums and bones around the teeth. The result is that the teeth become loose and are lost.

While gum disease accounts for the greatest amount of tooth loss in adults, it also affects children. According to the American Dental Association, approximately one in five children has some form of gum disease, and, of course, the longer a person has this disease, the greater his chances of losing his teeth.

Even if the disease has made considerable progress, your dentist can often control it through regular cleaning of the teeth to remove plaque and calculus. The dentist also may perform a gingivectomy -- surgical removal of diseased tissue -- in order to halt the disease's progress.

However, this type of treatment cannot rebuilt the destroyed tissue, and the dental patient must take excellent care of his oral tissues to prevent the disease from recurring.

Again, the best method of prevention is regular toothbrushing after all meals to prevent plaque from forming on the teeth. This, combined with regular visits to the dentist for removal of any deposits which have formed, will help to prevent gum disease or to halt its progress.

Burlison Takes Floor First Day

Freshman Congressman, Bill D. Burlison (D-Mo.) of the 10th Congressional District became the first freshman congressman of the 91st Congress to be recognized by the Speaker of the House of Representatives for debate on the floor of the House today.

The issue that Burlison spoke about concerned the "unfaithful elector" of North Carolina who cast his vote for American Independent Party candidate, George Wallace, although the state went in the Nixon column.

Burlison argued that even though the elector may have been morally bound to vote for President-elect Nixon, there was no such legal obligation, and his vote for Wallace should be counted.

The new Congressman from Cape Girardeau made it clear that he opposed the electoral college system and he noted that on the first day of the session he had introduced legislation providing for popular election of the President.

In conclusion, Burlison stated, "Let us not approach the problem Piccemea as here proposed. Instead, let us in this first session of the 91st Congress discharge our full responsibility by starting the surn of the wheels which will mean amendment to our Constitution and elimination of the inocuous electoral college system."

Both the House and the Senate defeated the effort to change the ' unfaithful elector's" vote.

Flurry of New Bills Introduced

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) Members of both houses in the Missouri Legislature jumped up with new bills Thursday as introduction was opened up immediately after Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' budget message.

The appropriation bills to carry out a $1.3 billion record budget, in fact, were offered even before the governor addressed a joint session of the House and Senate. They were the first House bills.

First bill in the Senate was by Sen. A. Basey Vanlandingham, D-Columbia, to increase state aid under the school foundation program by $35 million a year for each of the next four years.

By that time, Vanlandingham said, state and local money for school operations would be on a 50-50 basis as pledged by the Democratic governor in his campaign. Both parties have endorsed this idea.

The second bill in the Senate touched a sensitive legislative spot. It would repeal outright the motor vehicle inspection law which just went into effect.

Sen. John E. Downs, D-St. Joseph offered the measure. Many legislators have said their constituents are up in arms about the new law.

Downs said it should be repealed immediately to "stop the frauds which a small percentage of inspectors are perpetrating on the people. He said an immediate repeal would give the legislature time to consider other legislation in this field during the current session

A constitutional amendment proposed in the Senate would permit the legislature to have annual sessions and allow the legislature to set its own time for convening and adjourning.

Another proposal for Constitutional change would put women on the same basis as men as far as jury duty is concerned.
